REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET,

For Assembly,
G. G. MATTERN, of Patton township.
C. T. FRYBERGER, of Philipsburg.
For Sheriff,
JOHN A. WOLFE, of Philipsburg.
For Treasurer,
E. TYSON, of Philipsburg.
For Recorder,
JOHN F. HARTER, of Millheim.
For Register,
GEORGE W. FISHER, of Halfmoon.
For Commissioners,
J. B. STROHM, of Potter township.
D. B. KUNES, of Liberty township.
For Auditors.
SAMUEL T. GRAY, of Patton twp.
W. B. KRAPE, of Spring Mills.

Do not vote for George Fisher for register because he is a cripple, but vote for him because he is a Republican and represents the party that always looks to the interest of the taxpayer. See!

McCORMICK was beaten for the legislature two years ago, all honor to Centre countians for so doing, and this fall he will be buried so deep he wont get out in time to come out again two years hence.

HERE'S to the Pennsylvania Mugwump of the vintage of 1890! He is on very good terms with himself because nobody else is, and may be live long enough to persuade himself that Fate was kind in converting his fingers into a rake to haul the nuts off the fire for his Democratic bosses.

IT is probably true enough that Mr. Ishler did not pay $900 for his nomination. The deal is only to be consummated providing Mr. Ishler is elected. We feel very safe in saying that there will be no $900 paid for his election as Mr. Wolfe is the man who the people want.

NORTHAMPTON democrats are discussing the advisability of changing their rules to enable them to elect delegates to their State convention sometime in the same year that the Convention is held. There ought to be no hesitation about this in either party. The reform has already begun in the Republican party by the change made in Schuylkill and it cannot be very long before it is made complete.

IF John H. Holt had never been elected to the legislature he might have stood well in the opinion of Centre county and elsewhere through the State, but his two years' record in the legislature plainly demonstrated that if Centre county is the home of Governors and statesmen, it also raises some mighty worthless sons. McCormick had better profit by Holt's experience.

THE democratic party is certainly in bad straits: The main party organ last week devoted over three columns trying to tell its readers why the democratic candidates put in nomination by the "ring" against the voice of the majority should be elected, and the whole three columns boiled down would only amount to about two lines, namely: "Vote for the democratic nominees because they are democrats."

THE Pottsville Miners' Journal is making urgents appeals to the quarreling Republicans of Schuylkill county to get together and win. This is thoroughly, sound advice: A good deal is involved in the result in that county. It elects a Congressman, a Senator, and five members of the Legislature, and nothing is more certain than thrt the Republicans will lose some of these which they ought not to lose unless they get together and work in harmony.

IT IS sated in some of the dispatches from Venango county that ex-Senator Lee expects to be a candidate for Congress to succeed the late Congressman Watson. It is very doubtful where Mr. Lee stands on the Governorship, although he attended the Independent Conference at Altoona last week and there has been an understanding that he was inclined at least to support Pattison. If he should take that position he would hardly expect a Republican nomination for Congress.

LAST DAY FOR NATURALIZATION.

Following is an abstract from the election laws relative to naturalization of voters and payment of taxes:

Every person desiring to become naturalized must swear that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and renounce and relinquish any title or order of nobility to which he now is or hereafter may be entitled, and must absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state or sovereignty whatever, and particularly to the government of the country of whom he was before a subject. They must also have the following qualifications:

They must have resided within the jurisdiction of the United States for at least five years.

They must have declared their intentions (first papers) to become citizens at least two years previous to their application for naturalization papers.

They must have resided in the State for at least one year.

Upon their application in court to become citizens, they must produce a qualified elector to prove the foregoing qualifications.

They must be naturalized at least one month before they can vote.

Persons of foreign birth arriving in the United States, when under the age of eighteen, need not declare intentions, (first papers) but can become citizens without such papers, after being of age and residents of the United States for at least five years, and residents of this State one year; the facts to be proved by a qualified elector.

Naturalized citizens, to become legal voters, must have the same qualifications that native born electors possess, so far as residence and the payment of taxes are concerned.

The foreign born son of a naturalized citizen can vote on his father's papers where the father was naturalized before the son became of age; but if the son has arrived at the age of twenty one before the father was naturalized, then the son must become a citizen in the same manner as other foreign born persons.

Any prothonotary who shall issue, or cause to be issued, any fraudulent papers, shall be subject to a fine and imprisonment.

Remember Saturday, October 4th, is the last day for naturalization.

Last day for the payment of taxes—Saturday, October 4th, 1890.

To be qualified to vote, each electors if twenty two years old and upwards, must have paid a State or County tax within two years, and at least one month prior to election.

Said tax must have been assessed at least two months prior to election.

Electors voting on age need not pay a tax.

Naturalized, as well as native born citizens, must pay a tax in order to be qualified to vote.

Remember Saturday, October 4th, is the last day for the payment of taxes.

THE official vote of Kentucky at the election held in August shows that the Democratic candidate for clerk of the Court of Appeals received a majority 21,374 larger than the Democratic candidate for State Treasurer. There is a very reasonable explanation for this difference. Eight years ago the Democrats elected a beastly obscene drunkard to the Appellated Clerkship chiefly through the aid of the Louisville Courier Journal. During his incubency he has wallowed in liquor while deputies have performed his duties. The first opportunity the people had to express their disgust with the mistake into which they were led was at the election last month, when a new Clerk was to be chosen. By giving the new candidate as large a majority as possible they hoped probably to wipe out the disgrace under which the State has rested for eight years.

THE only thing that can be said in support of Morrison's candidacy for recorder is that he is a cripple. Were it only his leg that was crippled it might avail him to run his campaign as he has started it on the "sympathy dodge" but as Mr. Morrison is pretty well known throughout the county he will find when the votes are all in and counted that he will need more sympathy than at any previous time.

Mrs. Gazzam—Your house is of the Ionic order, isn't it?

Mrs. Fangle—No, indeed; we don't owe a cent on it.

—Nordeck September 11th.

IT IS A MATTER OF INTEREST.

Under the head of "A matter of interest to county tax payers," the Watchman last week spun out one-half column of the foulest, most contemptible lies that ever appeared in the columns of a political newspaper. Ever since there has been a Republican board of commissioners the Watchman has kicked and spluttered about imaginary things and brought charges against the board which were as false as they were atrocious, and all for what reason? Not because there was a word of truth in them, and none knew that fact better than the Watchman editor, but simply because with the advent of a Republican board of commissioners a large revenue was cut off from the Watchman office.

For years most all the county printing had been done there and at an enormous price. Often double what a job of work was worth was charged and paid by a democratic board of commissioners. With the advent of a Republican board all this was stopped. What work was done had to be done at a reasonable price. If an enormous bill was sent in it was cut down to what was right. The present board of commissioners were acting in the interest of the taxpayer and not for one man, and hence for this reason, in addition to political affiliation to his party, the Watchman editor has continued to illy abused the present board of commissioners.

The pledges made by the candidates that "taxes would be reduced and that a new leaf would be turned over in the management of the financial affairs of the county" have been well and faithfully kept by the officers. Taxation has been very materially reduced. From 3 mills it has been brought down to 2 Is not one-third a reduction worth while speaking of? As to valuation: the valuation of stock and real estate is now on an average lower than it was under the democratic administration. Is not this a fact worthy of consideration on the part of the farmer and tax payer when he comes to cast his ballot on the 4th of next November? But this is not all.

They promised "economy in the management of the financial affairs," and they have faithfully kept that promise. Not only did they reduce the rate of taxation one third but they so managed that now, at the end of three years, after paying upwards of ten thousand dollars extra expense for murder trials; almost twenty thousand dollars to build the bridges either swept away or damaged by the flood of 1889; about six thousand dollars' indebtedness left over from the democratic administration, they now have almost as large a surplus on hand as there was when the present board was sworn in almost three years ago.

And this is not all; they have regularly and faithfully disbursed to every township in the county its portions of the moneys received from the sale of unseated lands for taxes, and at all times has the State been paid in full the portion of tax due the Commonwealth. This is more than can be said, or at least proven, of the democratic board of commissioners.

We charge that, during the last ten years of the democratic administration in this county, they not only collected an enormous tax but they, illegally appropriated moneys rightly belonging to the State and to the townships in this county. That through this illegal appropriation of money it was that the county debt was paid and the surplus accumulated. That the actual running expenses of the county at that time were one fourth more, comparatively, than they are now, which fact plainly indicates the extravagance of a democratic administration.

Now let the Watchman editor come out and answer the above charges, and answer not merely on his own contradiction but with proven facts, and then there will be forthcoming evidence to prove our assertions. And this is not all, but it is enough for one time. Let the voter duly consider and weigh carefully every fact above set forth and then if he can conscientiously go to the polls and vote for high taxation and robbery, let him do it.

HE IS THE MAN.

Of all the men put in nomination for County Commissioner none are more deserving of election than just James B. Strohm. And further, there is more reason why he should be elected than there is for the whole democratic ticket. All the men but Strohm are men who have never had any experience in the Commissioner's office. Though they may be, and doubtless are, all good business men, yet there are many things in connection with the management of the affairs in the Commissioners office that no man can transact promptly and correctly unless he has has had seme experience.

During the two years that Mr. Strohm has been clerk for the present board he has acquired a complete knowledge of the routine of business of the office and, in addition, has displayed that ability that at once commends him as a proper person to put in the position to help manage the county's finances. Under his administration, so far as he is able to do, the rate of taxation will be kept as low as possible and the strictest economy will be practiced in the disbursement of the county funds.

In addition to all this Mr. Strohm is a pleasant, sociable gentleman and one with whom it is a pleasure to transact business, and his election will be an honor to the county as well as a stroke of business policy. Voters! consult your own interest by voting for James B. Strohm for county commissioner at the polls next November.

A MAGNIFICENT PLAY HOUSE.

Garman's New Opera House now Completed and Ready for the Opening on Thursday.

Bellefonte has long needed and demanded a good opera house but there were no men of means willing to lay out sufficient money to erect one lest it should prove a failure. For three years Bellefonte has had no amusement during the winter save a half dozen lectures or entertainments brought here by the W. C. T. U. In the spring of this year it was announced that Daniel Garman would build an opera house. It was at first supposed to be only talk but when work was commenced it did appear as if it would prove a reality; but no one had any idea that it would prove to be the magnificent play house that it is now when completed. Nicely located on the ground floor, large and roomy, well lighted, well seated and well heated, with proper and abundant ventilation, it is a house equal to any in the State and the superior of which never was built.

The stage is large and capable of holding any troupe that travels. It is fitted up with a full and complete set of exceedingly handsome and artistic scenery; and lighted with both electric light and gas, as is also the main body of the house either of which can be used alone or both together. Altogether through the entire house there are about 225 lights. Under the stage are six large dressing rooms besides an extensive lobby or hall way. There is water in the dressing rooms and also on the stage and in the rigging loft to be used in case of fire. The curtains are all drop curtains, not a roll curtain being used on the stage. The set pieces are all on patented rollers so that the adjustment of them requires but a moment. All the lights are regulated from switchboards on the stage.

The seating capacity of the house is between eight hundred and one thousand. The chairs are all of the most modern and comfortable make and are placed far enough apart for all comfort and convenience. Not only is the entire lower part seated with chairs but most of the balcony. We will not attempt to describe the different and varied colors and tints in the painting and frescoing No pen picture could do it justice; it must be seen to be appreciated. The orchestra will be curtained off from the main room and heavy curtains of dark material will divide the lobby from the main auditorium. The entrance to the house is large and nicely finished. Just inside of the main entrance to the right is the ticket office. All the aisles are carpeted so that coming in or going out will not disturb the audience or the play. All in all it is a complete building but must be seen to be appreciated and we can assure all those who attend the opening to-morrow night that they will receive an unexpected surprise and enjoy a rare treat. If you have not yet purchased a ticket for Nordeck do so at once.

Sweet Sixteen—Have you hammocks for sale?

Salesman—Yes, mum; double or single?

Sweet Sixteen (blushing furiously)—Why,——er—well let me see; oh, yes, Cousin Nell is coming to visit me, shortly, so I guess I'll take the double one, and the salesman wrapped up a large smile in the bundle as he made the sale.

"It's awfully hard," said the Five Dollar Bill, as he was borrowed for the hundredth time, to go through life entirely a loan."

SENATOR DELAMATER.

Senator George W. Delamater, the republican candidate for governor, has been here and gone, and, we feel very safe in saying that his visit to this place was not devoid of good results. Mr. Delamater made many warm friends and not a few votes. His coming to Bellefonte has entirely disproved all assertions made about him by democratic papers and has shown him in his true light, a man of the people and for the people; a man who has the interests of the farmer and laboring man as much at heart, if not more so, than that of the capitalist or corporation. A man who considers himself the equal of all but the superior of none; a man who shakes the hand of the laborer with as much vigor and energy as he does the banker or the retired gentleman. Such is the man who is now the candidate for governor.

More than all he clearly proved by his bearing while here that he has accepted the nomination in trust as the gift of the people and, though he will faithfully discharge all duties involved yet he is not so much rapt up in self but what he can spend a day with a people, meeting them pleasantly and socially, without making a political seance of the occasion. The Senator made a good impression in Centre county and if at any time there were any republicans who had been undecided they are now strongly Delamater men; and, indeed, we heard a few democrats remark that they would vote for that man. Mr. Delamater is also the better for being here for he has seen how nobly Centre countians can suffer defeat in their home candidate and how loyally they stand to the choice of the majority. It was one remarkable fact that the most complimentary remarks on Mr. Delamater were passed by farmers.

SPEAKER REED'S SPEECH.

Speaker Reed was given an enthusiastic welcome home yesterday evening, and he signalized the occasion by delivering a splendid speech upon the political issues of the times. It makes most interesting and instructive reading, and conveys to the public a lucid and destinct idea of the events of this turbulent session of Congress.

The Republican party has never had to confront more unscrupulous tactic than those by which the Democratic party endeavored to prevent it from exercising the control which the verdict of the people had confided to it. To meet those tactics required the adoption of new methods, and in devising and applying them Speaker Reed bore the leading part. This invests with peculiar interest his review of the proceedings.

The measures by which the Republican party has fulfilled the pledges given by it in the campaign are also passed in review. The record is an imposing one and is in itself a complete justification of the new rules that made possible such efficient discharge of public business. One point he makes very clear—that the result is a great increase in the direct accountability to the Nation of the party in power. Having acquired the power to control and direct the public business, they have incurred the responsibility. This is a distinct gain to good government and the force of public opinion will eventually require the Senate also to amend its rules so that the majority shall be able to control its proceedings. The power of a minority to prevent action on so important a measure as the Federal Election bill is oligarchical suppression of public rights.

Bucktail Reunion.

The Fourth Annual Reunion of the "Regimental Association of the Bucktail or First Rifle Regiment, P. R. V. C." will be held at Wellsboro, Tioga county, Pa., on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, October 14th, 15th and 16th, 1890. All the railroads will sell excursion tickets to and from Wellsboro. A large programme has been arranged for the entertainment of visitors including an excursion to Watkins' Glen on Thursday. The people of Wellsboro extend a cordial invitation to the Bucktails and all their friends to be present and participate in the reunion.

Teacher—In what battle was Stonewall Jackson mortally wounded?

Pupil—Dunno—I guess it was the last one he fought in.

GENERAL NOTES.

Brooklyn schools opened Tuesday with 60,000 pupils.

The narrowest block in Oil City is but three feet wide at its narrow end.

More than 5,000 men in New York do business under the protection of their wives' names.

There is wheat enough at Portland, Ore., to load 57 ships and to give $2,000,000 to the farmers.

The Mayor of Boston receives from the West End Street Railway Company 5,000 free tickets weekly for charitable uses.

A Genesee, Mich., Supervisor sends in his report to the County Clerk of a person dying of "information of the brain."

Mrs. Robinson, of Fort Gratiot, Mich., recently married her adopted son. She was 45 years old and the young man 32.

The 18-year old daughter of Swaine Kite, of Madison county, died from lock jaw, superinduced by the pulling of a tooth.

A chair 120 years old is in use in an office in Spring City, this State, and is said to be just as good as the day it was bought.

Cyrus W. Field raises an acre of cultivated sunflowers on his estate, Ardsley, near Tarrytown, on the Hudson, for chicken feed.

Mrs. Jacob Benton, of Lancaster, N. H has learned five languages while an invalid in the last five years. She speaks and writes Volspuk fluently.

Green Bay, Wis., policemen had a picnic. The sale of beer realized $312,-05, which will go to the purchase of winter overcoats for the force.

Daniel Stone, a Fulton, Wis., farmer, has a horse and buggy with a history. He (the horse) is 37 years of age and fought in the army, on the Confederate side.

A small schooner, owned and sailed by two Mazah Indians, took 2,000 cases of dynamite from Port Townsend to Juneau, Alaska, for the Treadwell Mining Company.

Charles Faye, who died in Brooklyn a day or two ago, was 6 feet 2 inches high, though only 14 years old. His death, physicians say, was due to too rapid growth.

Jake Kilrain is going to Star. His play is founded on an episode in Senator Conklings life, where he was knocked out by a professional sparrer disguised for the occasion.

In nearly every foreign country may be found colonies of old soldiers who are on Uncle Sam's pension list. Germany alone has 569 of them, Great Britain 475 and Switzerland 69.

A Cobbville, Ga. Man tells of a pig which has been adopted by an old cat. She had four kittens besides, and the old cat was as much attached to the pig as if it had been one of her kittens.

A scientist computes that with the aid of a machine constructed on the principle of the boring, drilling and pumping apparatus of the mosquito, a hole could be bored to the centre of the earth in less than a day.

It is a curious fact that when the policeman in Central Park, New York, undertake to drive the public off the grass they dispose of the old women and children promptly, but somehow the pretty girls are undisturbed.

Rev. Mr. Gould, the Unitarian Ludington preacher, has a wife as is one. He was sick Sunday and the good lady preached for him, and now the congregation is thinking about calling her regularly if he remains ill.

Rather a touching incident occurred at the Boston and Maine depot at Biddeford, Me. A man has been visiting his family there, and though he intended to return in two weeks, cried like one who was to be absent for years.

In Alpine county, Cal., near the Nevada State line, according to the census taker, there is no church and no minister, but four liquor sellers and nine professional gamblers, and yet the jail has not had an inmate since 1887.

The eagle is not put upon most American coin as a hint that money flies.

'Papa,' said the little one, 'will there be newspapers in heaven?'

'Perhaps, my child, but there will be a new set of editors and reporters.'

He. 'My greatest fault is that I am apt to speak without thinking.'

She. 'Well, I suppose it can't be well avoided unless you quit talking.'

The custom of heads of families kissing their pretty nurse girls is beginning to attract attention. It's time it should. What is the matter with kissing those who are not servants or nurses? These class distinctions do not look well in America.

Station-master. 'Come, come, my good man! You mustn't walk on the track.' Tramp (disgusted). "The conductor says I can't ride and you say I can't walk. What's your blamed old road here for, anyway?

Our Story Teller

THE EXILES

A RUSSIAN STORY.

Aided by the old maid, who had embraced M. Lafleur, Metek's wife pushed the heavy table into the corner where the travelers were seated and, taking a seat herself, invited them to eat by setting the example. The young unfortunate, exorcised by the chaman of the Faubourg Saint-Antoine, placed herself at the side of her liberator.

The latter did not lose a mouthful. He ate four pieces at a time, as they say, although the food was entirely devoid of salt.

"Let us not forget the tea!" cried he, after his hunger was somewhat appeased. "It is necessary for the invalid—and for us!"

Three days had elapsed since the fugitives had disembarrassed themselves of their Cossack escort, and they had partaken of nothing warm after quitting the yourte of refuge.

The request of the chaman for tea was taken to herself by the old maid, who, with a seductive smile, made a significant gesture, she would look after it, and it would be good!

M. Lafleur then noticed that the Yakoute old maid wore, over her reindeer-skin pantaloons and under her kamley, an immense crinoline. This crinoline, which was all the rage in Paris a number of years ago, was evidently making a tour of the world.

Chort appeared at the door.

"What about the dogs?" demanded he.

The dogs were howling without, as if they knew they were excluded from the feast.

"We will give them the fish intended for ours," said Metek's wife, to relieve them from suspense.

Chort was directed to carry out the kettle which was boiling in the tchouvale.

"You will sleep here," said the old woman to the travelers.

Yermac had scarcely touched the food placed before him. With his head in his hands, and his elbows on the table, he was plunged in deep thought. Never had a representative of the law and authority been placed in a stranger situation! That he should find himself constrained by circumstances to share the fortune and the wants of rebellious subjects whom he ought to be bringing to punishment! But had not the moment come to break this bond of complicity with them which had been only too long in force? His obligation! But is a magistrate ever bound to keep his word with malefactors, whatever he may have promised them? If Metek returned to the village, in his quality of chief, could he not summon him, declare that he was the victim of violence and demand assistance to take the fugitives back to Sredne-Kolimsk, shunned by them on their road, where would be found, in the detachment of Cossacks furnished by the Stanitsa and subject to the orders of the Ipravsnik of the town, a force more than sufficient to assure the triumph of the law!

CHAPTER XVIII.—AT THE MERCY OF A HURRICANE.

The chief of police was seated, as on the preceding days, in M. Lafleur's narta. The fugitives were fast leaving in the distance the settlement where they had been so hospitably received.

Why had not Yermac followed up his resolution to betray them? Because the chief Metek, upon whom he had counted, had not returned. He had been compelled to resume the journey with his companions without opposition, seeming a very unimportant personage beside the all-powerful chaman.

The nartas were speeding along the very steep right bank of the Kolima, going in the direction of Nijni-Kolimsk, the travelers intending to pass this last Russian station. Yermac thought he would be set at liberty when the fugitives reached the frontiers of the country of the Tchouktchis.

In the middle of the day, the weather suddenly changed; grayish mists arose from behind the wooded hills left by the travelers on their right.

These mists indicated the approach of a pourga, a tempest peculiar to the Siberian regions and one of the greatest obstacles to a winter journey across the solitudes of snow. Like the norther of the southern latitudes, the pourga often comes on unexpectedly without the least warning and passes, sometimes for more than a week, through successive phases of violence and fury.

Ordinarily, this tempest is not accompanied by a fall of snow, but it is characterized by immense whirling masses of snow which the wind tears from the plains and toundras and which it transports afar, in thick and suffocating clouds which prevent one from seeing at a distance of four paces. The air is literally obstructed with thick flakes, which, in a few seconds, wall up, so to speak, one's eyes and nostrils. The force of the wind renders standing upright an impossibility. Advancing in such weather is not to be thought of, and the unfortunate surprised by one of these tempests can only bury himself under his furs behind his sledge and wait there without other shelter, shivering and benumbed with cold, for days and nights, until the wind weakens. If, before that hour of deliverance, his provisions give out, all his efforts to escape from death will be useless, the frightful hurricane bearing away whatever cries he may utter. Worn out with cold, lassitude and hunger, he sinks beneath the snow, the white winding-sheet of which speedily marks with a slight undulation the place of his final repose.

The black cloud, which for an hour had hung about the horizon, spread rapidly towards the south and enveloped with sombre mists the last glimmers of the Arctic twilight. The wind, loaded with hoarse bellowings brought from the ice-floes and ice-fields of the Polar Sea, hurled itself upon the plain raising whirlwinds of snow, which sped like tall phantoms through the darkness towards the thick of the advancing tempest.

Yegor had scarcely time to order the two nartas to be brought together before the hurricane burst upon the fugitives. Soon every sound was lost in the roar of the tempest, while the snow in flaky clouds absorbed the air and impeded respiration.

Yegor and Nadege could no longer see even their team of dogs, and, in the brief pause they made a short time afterwards to assure themselves that no one was missing, they perceived that the second sledge, in which were M. Lafleur and Yermac, had not followed them. Five minutes, ten minutes elapsed, and still the two men did not come. They uttered cries and Yegor discharged his pistols. He despatched Tekel as far back as he dare go, but the Yakoute returned, saying that he could not see two paces before him and that the gale had effaced all traces of their passage.

Yegor desired to wait, hoping that the delayed sledge would rejoin them. He advised Nadege and Ladislas to descend and take refuge behind the narta. It was but a very weak defence against such a loosening of the elements. The young girl and the lad could breathe only with great difficulty by holding their faces almost against the ground.

The obscurity rendered the use of the compass impossible, and hence Yegor no longer knew where they were. But had he been able to recognize his road, in what would it have served him? They were the playthings of the wind, which drove them before it, preventing them from taking any other course than its own.

The white gloom thickened, growing more and more opaque. Suddenly, a half-suffocated cry, a cry of desperation, rang out from the midst of the whirling cloud.

"Monsieur Lafleur! Monsieur Lafleur!" answered Yegor, Nadege and Ladislas, in one voice.

The dark and vague profile of a narta passed before them with giddy speed, as if drawn along in a whirlwind.

"To the sledge!" commanded Yegor. "We must follow our friend's narta!"

The wind had extreme impetuosity. It swept the plain roaring strangely, howling as howl the wolves. Tekel had no need to excite the dogs; the poor animals shot off madly.

"Hold me tightly," cried Nadege, drawing closer to Yegor; "it seems to me as if the wind would blow me away."

After an hour of frightful traveling—an hour which seemed to them a century!—the fugitives perceived from the scattered bushes, standing out blackly from the whiteness of the snow, that they were approaching a river; but the wind and the density of the snow which enveloped them had so increased that they could see nothing.

Suddenly, they found themselves in the midst of a forest, the tall trees of which formed an obstacle to the mutinous blast and its icy breath. They asked themselves by what miracle they had reached it, and how it happened that they were still alive!

"Monsieur Lafleur!" cried Yegor.

"Present!" answered the dancing-master, whose sledge had been the first to stop.

"You have had a narrow escape, Monsieur Lafleur," said Yegor; "I thought I would have to wear mourning for you!"

"Ah! ma foi! I thought it was the end of the world! The learned say that we shall perish by cold, and I suppose the snow hurricane will have its part in the closing scenes of the last hour!"

They talked without seeing each other, in the midst of the obscurity.

The Yakoute Tekel had, meanwhile, gathered alder and fir branches and kindled a fire with them.

The fugitives uttered cries of joy on again seeing light and fire. They hastened to the blaze to warm themselves—they were covered with snow and scarcely recognizable! Yermac made very strange grimaces.

"Ladislas! Where is Ladislas!" asked Nadege, looking around her for the little Pole.

Alas! he was not to be found! He had been torn from the sledge by the terrible hurricane!

Yegor called Wab. He fastened his dark lantern to the dog's collar and, after pronouncing the name of Ladislas several times, sent the animal to search for the child.

After being gone an hour, Wab returned alone. The animal was shaking with cold; from the bloody marks on its paws, they saw that the creature had thoroughly searched a long distance, but without result. It had returned to the forest that it might not perish from exhaustion.

Nadege wept, repeating the name of her adopted brother. Yegor and M. Lafleur, silent and afflicted, thought of the poor child lost on the frozen plain and struggling in the darkness against the furious and icy wind, amid the blinding snow.

The chief of police was touched by the grief of the fugitives and strove to impart to them, in regard to the lad, a hope he did not share.

The two Yakoutes prepared a shelter by making a deep excavation in the snow. The travelers spread their coverings in it, and took refuge there to await a lull in the storm.

The dogs were unharnessed and grouped themselves in a circle on the snow, in which they dug holes to obtain warmth. A second fire was kindled at the edge of the forest by Yegor's order. He hoped that Ladislas might, perhaps, be guided by the light of this fire and rejoin them.

CHAPTER XIX.—LADISLAS AND THE GOLD-ROBBERS.

When the band of gold-robbers to which Yermac's son belonged quitted the neighborhood of the consumed forest of Ostrovoye, leaving for dead the chief of police, Dimitri assumed the command of it.

The young man told the truth when he assured his father that he had participated neither in the assassination of Major Dobson and his servant nor in that of the Russian Khabaroff. The band had been renewed several times and, when it attacked the chief of police, there remained of its former members, upon whom the stigma of the murders rested, only the chief Koskintine shot and killed by Yermac.

The others—considered as associates—had upon their consciences only the rough means employed to procure the gold stolen by the miners. This gold they carried into China across the frontier of the Amoor, employing against the Cossacks charged with guarding the banks of the river now force and now stratagem. They hid their gold dust in loaves of bread, introduced it in small ingots into their horses' hoofs or placed it in the stomachs of fish, transforming themselves according to circumstances into merchants or fishermen.

The alarm spread by Yermac, by means of the Cossacks, caused redoubled watchfulness among the posts scattered along the left bank of the immense Asiatic stream. Besides, when the escape of an exile is the matter in hand, nothing is neglected to stop him; if necessary, the Russian government would put an army in motion to arrest a single man, in order to discourage other attempts of the same kind.

The bandits commanded by Dimitri found themselves compelled to change their plans and to give up, for a time, crossing the Amoor. They went towards the Gulf of Penjinsk, situated at the most northern point of the Sea of Okhotsk. At this spot, they counted upon succeeding in crossing the Stanovoi Mountains, by ascending the Omolon to its source.

They had procured a number of nartas drawn by reindeer purchased in the Yakoute villages, and, forcing their journey, had already arrived among the spurs of the great Stanovoi chain, with their bare and snowy peaks. They did not hesitate to venture among these terrible mountains, from whence it is rare that one can make his exit when he has entered their sombre and inextricable labyrinths.

Yegor, also, had for a moment entertained the thought of taking this route. He knew, thanks to his investigations, that every summer the natives and the Russian half-breeds from the shores of the Sea of Okhotsk assemble together in a village named Tchimikan, at the mouth of the Ouda, to exchange furs, fresh meat and fish for spirituous liquors, calico and tobacco brought by the American whalers; but the fear of finding Russian vessels in that interior and altogether Muscovite sea had caused him to abandon the project.

The gold-robbers could manage matters easier by mingling with the trappers (promichlenliks), and such was, in fact, their intention.

The last exploit of the band had been the robbery of the mail which departs monthly from Ajan—a station in the district of Okhotsk, founded in 1848 by a Russo-American fur company. It may be said, in passing, that the postal road, a common, narrow path cut through the forests from Ajan to Yakoutsk, was used by the Russian government to transport arms and munitions to its possessions on the Pacific, during the Crimean war. At intervals of from twenty to twenty-five miles are postal stations, where reindeer are kept for the mail and the few travelers who venture into these regions.

The mail carries every month about a dozen letters; it is entrusted to a courier, who, ordinarily, reaches Yakoutsk in ten days by traveling day and night. In winter, the journey is made with reindeer harnessed in pairs to a narta; in summer, the reindeer are replaced by horses. This postal route connects Yakoutsk, the capital of eastern Siberia, with Kamtchatka.

The robbery of the mail could not be of the least profit to the Siberian bandits; but it furnished them an opportunity of maintaining their state of revolt against the laws and authority.

One evening, the bandits halted at the entrance of a narrow valley, there to establish their encampment in the open air. The night was dark, but the sky clear and the temperature comparatively mild. Besides Dimitri, the band included two Tunguses, a Lamoute from the Bay of Tausk, a Koriak, a Ghiliak fisherman, a Russian convict escaped from the colony on the Island of Saghalien, the fierce Cossack Ivan with whom our readers are already acquainted, and, lastly, another escaped exile. It will be seen that the band had been augmented by the reception of several new recruits.

The Lamoute had drawn from his pocket one of those enormous agates found in the beds of rivers, which the natives use for fire-stones. He began to strike it against his tinder-steel, employing for tinder excrescences from the birch tree boiled. This tinder plunged in a small bone box, in which was a supply of sulphur, procured for him a flame which he utilized to light the bivouac fire.

During this operation, Ivan, axe in hand, was furiously felling the young pines of the vicinity, and Koschevine was carrying the wood with which to feed the blaze.

The two Tunguses had already established themselves beside a dead horse, of which they were devouring the flesh scarcely presented by them to the flames; it was the horse of one of them, an old hunter by the name of Ephraim, a great slayer of bears in the district of Okhotsk, who had the reputation of slaughtering or capturing at least twenty of these animals every summer. Ephraim, too tightly squeezed by the Ipravsnik of his village—a young Russian of thirty, who passed his time in getting drunk in company with the priest—had treated him as he treated his bears and had afterwards escaped by flight.

He had met the band of gold-robbers only a few hours before, and had immediately become a member of it. His horse, competing in swiftness with the reindeer, had broken a leg and, for that reason, been condemned to death. The old Tunguse, who had not too much feeling, had slain it after the fashion of the country. These Tunguses, though in general mild and pacific, are very cruel towards animals. Thus, their favorite mode of killing a horse which is to be eaten is to throw it upon the ground, tie it firmly with ropes and then to open the breast and plunge in the arm to compress the heart with the hand until death ensues. They claim that the meat is much improved by this process.

Old Ephraim and the other Tunguse were capable of eating the horse before the breaking up of the encampment.

The latter, named Avaram, with bronzed skin, very prominent cheek bones and small eyes black and bright as those of the Tartars, belonged to a Tunguse group of the southeast of Siberia. Entirely clothed in reindeer skin, his chief garment was a kind of large fur overcoat, open in front. To its neck was attached, to be used at need, a species of very gay hood—a malachi—made of the skins of red, black and gray foxes arranged in alternate bands, with a border of sea otter fur; tight-fitting skin breeches, with the hair inside, covered his thighs; his feet and legs were enclosed in reindeer skin boots with seal skin soles, reaching above his knees.

This Tunguse had joined the band of gold-robbers in the hope of gaining with it sufficient to pay the price of his betrothed, the daughter of one of the golovas or great chief of his tribe, a rare beauty whom he had obtained at the exorbitant figure of a hundred reindeer—a veritable fortune. Among the Tunguses of the southeast, the price of a woman varies from one reindeer to a hundred. They tell, however, of beauties of an inferior order obtained for a pipe of tobacco. These circumstances do not prevent the marriages from being celebrated by a Russian priest.

The other bandits, after having killed a passably foundered reindeer, roasted steaks cut from the animal; the Koriak and the Lamoute, on their side, prepared a soup with the contents of the reindeer's stomach.

This Koriak was a young man, the sole survivor of a family dead of hunger. When he related to his companions that each year, at the close of winter, famine decimated the inhabitants of Toumane because, at that time, the supply of fish caught during the summer gave out:

"Why don't you continue to fish!" asked one of the bandits of him.

"Ah! I don't know," answered he. "The Russian government furnishes us with packthread to make nets, but we give it to the Lamoutes on condition that they shall fish for us. Unfortunately, the most famished among us eat all at the beginning of the winter!"

The Lamoute wore suspended from his neck an enormous silver medal, the gift of the Czar, received as a reward for the assistance he had rendered his countrymen during one of their periodical famines. These spring famines are the scourge of Siberia. This medal, strangely placed on the bosom of a brigand, won for the entire band a great deal of respect from the natives.

The Ghiliak fisherman was a native of the lower Amoor country, forced to flee after having slain one of his relatives who had stolen from him the flint of his gun. He feared, not without reason, that the friends of the defunct might retaliate according to the Ghiliak code—an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. This barbarian, who was very superstitious and inclined to idolatry, had been baptized in accordance with the Greek rite, and wore about his neck several little metal crosses. His name was Michaeloff.

As to Ivan, that former Cossack had abandoned the post of the region of the Amoor, where he lived as a soldier-laborer, colonizing the country. These Cossacks owe a service of fifteen years, for which they receive an annual salary of about two dollars and a quarter, the government furnishing them, in addition, with rations of black bread and, sometimes, of tea. Their nourishment consists of salmon which they must catch themselves, and which, with different wild fruits and the bark and roots of several kinds of trees, forms a diet but little varied.

Those who live in the vicinity of the Bay of Castries consume a great quantity of very large and fine oysters. We know that the Russians visited the Amoor, for the first time, only in 1843; but, about ten years later, they succeeded in obtaining from the Chinese the cession of all the regions stretching from the left bank of the river to the previous boundary of Siberia, gaining by this "rectification" of the frontiers an immense and rich territory.

Ivan, who had grown weary of the life of a colonist, had deserted. He often mentioned to his companions this curious circumstance; upon the shores of the great Asiatic river, the animals of the cold countries meet those of the burning regions of the south. The reindeer there becomes the prey of the Bengal tiger, and the wild boar and the badger live, side by side, with the hare of the pole and the glutton.

Koschevine, the Russian, had escaped from the mines of Nertchinsk, following the course of the Amoor in the hope of being received by the native population established on its banks. He succeeded in passing all the Chinese posts in a small boat, keeping along the left shore of the stream, living upon the produce of his carabine and enduring great privations; at last he reached the Sea of Okhotsk, where he counted upon finding an asylum on board some ship. In this, he was unsuccessful; then, all chance of safety having vanished, he retraced his steps, resolved to return to the mines, where, nevertheless, a severe punishment awaited him, rather than die of wretchedness and hunger. But, after having scoured the country for some time, he had met the band of gold-robbers and had enrolled himself in its ranks.

When the bandits had satisfied their hunger, they loaded the fire with wood, and wrapped themselves in the warmest and largest coverings they possessed to sleep in the open air.

The night gave promise of being quiet, when, suddenly, cries were heard—cries of terror uttered by a child.

The men around the camp fire seized their weapons, and half raised themselves; soon they heard the snow cracking beneath the hoofs of a reindeer harnessed to a little sledge, and saw behind this sledge a pack of wolves hurrying along, howling and menacing.

As the sledge approached the bivouac, the intimidated wolves slackened their pace. The child, beside himself with fear, cried out incessantly. When the reindeer stopped, the poor little being fell inanimate into the arms of Dimitri and Koschevine who had gone to his aid, while old Ephraim, his Tunguse companion Avaram, the Lamoute and the Koriak fired numerous murderous arrows at the wolves and frightened them with discharges of fire-arms.

The inanimate child, half dead with terror, hunger and cold, was Ladislas.

The Lamoute saw his state of exhaustion, and taking from a bag a piece of frozen mare's milk, he broke some fragments from it with a hatchet and placed them in a copper pan over the fire.

The milk, speedily boiling and foaming, was presented to the lad. The first drops introduced into his mouth restored him to consciousness.

CHAPTER XX.—A LITTLE HERO.

How had Ladislas escaped death, lost, alone, shipwrecked, as it were, in the midst of the immense ocean of snow? After being hurled from the sledge into the thick of the hurricane, he arose safe and sound and succeeded in crawling under a bush which served him as a refuge.

The next day, after a night of watchfulness and anguish, he courageously set out in the direction it was probable the sledges had taken. He knew that the fugitives were going towards the north, and had learned how to tell where he was by studying certain undulations of the snow formed by the wind. But the plain stretched out in its terrible solitude beneath the winding sheet of winter.

A few stunted birches and willows, which arose here and there, resembled white monks at prayer upon the marble of a tomb. The sun disappeared below the red horizon—it seemed to have melted in a conflagration—and great pink reflections ran shivering over the silvered ground. The night came on and Ladislas had not seen a living creature. He sought a shelter in a forest. After having eaten a little frozen bread which he found in the pockets of his pelisse and drunk a few drops of brandy from the small flask he bore about him, he fell asleep, overcome with fatigue, at the foot of a tree, behind an old trunk about which the heaped up snow formed a sort of rampart.

Very early awake, he saw the day return after long and cruel hours of waiting, and was much surprised to perceive at a short distance a reindeer browsing on the tender portions of the branches of the birches.

He ran towards the animal. To judge from the saddle and leather bridle it wore, it was a reindeer prepared for mounting, which had strayed away. In fact, it allowed itself to be approached and seized by a strap.

The child climbed upon it, and thought himself saved, when, trusting to the instinct of the intelligent creature, he realized that, instead of going heedlessly forward, it was following a path leading to some inhabited spot.

In a few hours, he found himself in the midst of a Yakoute village, half covered by the debris of the recent pourga. The huts of this village were scattered about upon the snow, as if thrown there by chance. They were, nevertheless, constructed with exceptional solidity of trunks and branches of trees.

The villagers spoke a little Russian, and Ladislas received from them the most cordial hospitality. They warmed him, gave him an abundant repast, and helped him, the following day, to make with some birch limbs and straps a little sledge to which he harnessed his reindeer. He asked of them information concerning the country and what direction it was necessary to take to reach Nijni-Kolimsk—the sole means, by leaving that station to his left, thought he, of again finding Yegor and Nadege, who were to pass to the east of that town.

Two hours later, he started on his journey, driving a sledge for the first time in his life. This vehicle was of the most elementary description. Well wrapped in his furs, the little Pole held in his hand the rod which serves to direct the reindeer and to stop them in case of too rapid descent on snow-covered slopes. He went with extreme swiftness, hoping to reach Yegor's nartas on the morrow. He took no rest at night, and, as the sky was clear, guided himself by the polar star.

Of all these things, Ladislas told only what he judged proper to tell to the ill-looking men by whom he was surrounded, who questioned him with curiosity, greatly astonished to meet a child and a foreigner in these frightful solitudes.

"And the wolves?" demanded Dimitri of him—"the wolves that were howling behind you, ready to devour you? Were you not afraid of them?"

"The wolves?" said the child to the latter, whose red pantaloons, ornamented with silver and numerous and varied weapons, sufficiently indicated the chief of the band—"the wolves that were pursuing me! They were behind me for I know not how many hours!"

"They numbered at least two hundred!" said Ivan.

"At first," resumed Ladislas, "on turning around, I saw one—one only—which did not frighten me much. It trotted along, always maintaining the same distance, lessening or increasing its pace according to the speed of the sledge. But a second wolf that I noticed on the top of a small hill joined the other. A few minutes afterwards, on looking in their direction, I counted three of them! Then there were four, then five, then six, then eight, then ten, then twelve, and then twenty. I dare not look again. I could no longer count them, so largely had their number increased! But I urged on my reindeer, exciting it by every possible means. At last, I saw from a long distance the fire of your encampment. I hoped to find beside that fire—but, no matter! You have, indeed, saved my life, my friends, and I am very grateful to you!"

The young lad spoke with an assurance that delighted these fierce men, deprived of all family joys. They set before the child the best provisions they possessed—their dainties, so to speak.

"Where are you going?" asked Dimitri of him.

The chief of the brigands had a mild and intelligent countenance which pleased Ladislas.

Nevertheless, he hesitated to reply.

"You can speak," said Dimitri, taking the lad a little aside. "You have nothing to fear from me, despite my array of sabres and pistols. I belong to an honest family, and my father, who died but recently, left behind him a reputation for rectitude. At Moscow, everybody knows Yermac's worth."

This name struck the lad.

"I knew, bearing that name," said he, "the chief of police of Yakoutsk."

"The chief of police! Well, child, he was my father."

"And he is dead!" cried Ladislas, alarmed for Nadege and Yegor. "But only three days ago he was still with us!"

"How?—with you?—with whom?"

"With my adopted sister and the man who is going to marry her—and with M. Lafleur. Do you not know M. Lafleur, the dancing-master?"

"I left my father for dead very far from here, near the forest of Ostrovoye, at the foot of the Verkho-Yansk Mountains," said the chief of the bandits.

"Well, it was just there we met him, revived him, disinterred him—how shall I express it?"

"Disinterred him, child?"

"Oh! it is a strange story! Look! this revolver belonged to him!"

"My father alive!" murmured Dimitri, overcome with surprise; and an irresistible desire to see him again in life and obtain his pardon took possession of him. "Do you know," resumed he, lowering his voice, "where we can rejoin him—as well as your friends?"

"Yes," said the lad; "in the vicinity of Nijni-Kolimsk, near the frontier of the country of the Tchouktchis."

"Not another word," said Yermac's son. "In a moment, when all are asleep, I will tell you what we will do to again see before long your friends—and my father!"

CHAPTER XXI.—AN ELK HUNT.

It was only after every effort had been fruitlessly made to recover the little Pole, that Yegor succeeded in inducing the weeping and inconsolable Nadege to consent to resume the journey.

The succeeding days were of the most sorrowful description. The fugitives decided that they must follow the left bank of the Kolima. Ladislas had been lost not far from the river. He knew that they were going towards the north to reach the Arctic Ocean. If he were still alive, he would, perhaps, perceive the fire that they would light on establishing each encampment and would keep up every night upon an elevated shore.

Besides these reasons, Yegor had others for not going too far from the banks of the river. The provisions brought in the sledges had greatly diminished during the forced journeys across the desert of snow. But there existed on the borders of the Kolima, between the Bolchoy-Anlouy and the Mali-Anlouy rivers which flow into it, plains sheltered by lofty mountains from the winds of the north. The vegetation there is incomparably more beautiful. One finds there the aspen, the poplar, the willow, and the cedar; after having crossed the icy and bare toundra, these plains are the oases of these solitudes. The forests which clothe the sides of the mountains are inhabited by herds of reindeer; elk, foxes, and brown and black bears are met there in large numbers.

Yegor thought that it would be easy to kill some of these animals, which would furnish them with food for several days.

CENTRE BAPTIST ASSOCIATION.

Closes Its 1890 Session in Tyrone on Thursday—Reports and Resolutions.

Thursday was the last day of the three days' session of the Centre Baptist Association in Tyrone. The meeting together of the ministers, laymen and delegates proved very interesting and instructive.

From the letters the following statistics have been gleaned as the result of the past year's labors by the churches. Number of members last year, 2,221; increase by baptism, 122; increase by letter, 94; by experience 28, by restoration, 12; by addition of new churches, 110; total increase, 366.

Decrease by letter 147; by erasure, 65; by exclusion, 50; by death, 31; by disbanding of Altoona second church, 33; decrease, 236; net increase, 40, present membership, 2,261.

Contributions—For minutes, $52.14; foreign mission, $390.57; home missions, $165.13; general association, $615.51; education society, $181.67; publication society, $115.22; woman's missionary work, $483,32; care of church poor, $116.10; miscellaneous objects, $1022.75; building and repairs, $5142.76; home expenses, $12,040.11; total, $20,319.97.

Two churches failed to report and one was disbanded. Altoona second (colored) three new ones were received.

The following was adopted on the subject of temperance.

WHEREAS, The traffic of intoxicating drinks is now, as it ever has been, the enemy of good government, the home and mankind; and

WHEREAS, No evil has ever been abolished by selling it the right to exist and the saloon is a place that every decent person is ashamed to defend, therefore be it.

Resolved, That the liquor traffic is an enemy to the home, to society, to church and to state, and that the time has come when christian people and all lovers of good government should cease to be indifferent and to unite their efforts for the destruction of the traffic.

Resolved, That as servants of God and educators of the people, we deem it the religious duty of every pastor to instruct his people in the principles of prohibition, thus preparing them for the enforcement of prohibitory legislation.

Saltillo, Huntingdon county, was selected as the place of meeting for 1891 and the time on the Wednesday preceeding the first Lord's day.

Niagara Falls in the Early Fall Under Pennsylvania Railroad's Personally Conducted System.

A journey through Pennsylvania's mountain region and the noted lake district of New York may be enjoyed by joining the Pennsylvania Railroads personally-conducted tour arranged for Thursday September 11th. Tourists will leave Washington by special train of Pullman Parlor Cars and Day Coaches at 7.10 a. m., Baltimore, Union Station at 8.20, and arrive at Niagara Falls at 11.00 p. m. Round-trip tickets valid for ten days, allowing a stop-off at Watkins in either direction, will be sold at $10. It will be well to remember that this is the last opportunity to enjoy one of these very select and pleasurable outings and immediate attention should be paid to securing accommodations, which will be given upon application to Pennsylvania Railroad ticket offices.

A Tourist Agent and Chaperon will accompany the party and look after the comfort and enjoyment of all, making the trip partake of that peculiarly private character from which the personal escort system of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has derived so much of just praise.

A dangerous counterfeit is now in circulation in various parts of Pennsylvania. It is thus described: "The counterfeit is a ten-dollar National bank note of the German National bank of New Orleans, and will deceive the most careful. The back of the bill is excellent and defines detection; the paper is good. The front of the bill, however, is too pale, but this can easily be changed by the use of some drug. The G in the word German is quite dim and rather badly formed. The feathers in the wing of the eagle are scratched and somewhat indistinct. The ink is a brownish black. The figures on the bill are B 816,637, and the book number 1591. It has the letter check C. Altogether the counterfeit is a most excellent one."

BELLEFONTE VS. TYRONE.

The Home Team Had a Regular Walk-over with the Visiting Nine.

On Friday afternoon on the Athletic grounds the Tyrone base ball club was defeated by the home club by a score of 12 to 3. The game was called shortly after 2 o'clock. The home team was first at the bat. In the first inning the home team scored one run which was put down to the credit of Musser. Metcalf and Vetz constituted the battery of the visiting club. Fahnestock and Yerger were struck out and Atherton had been put out on a fly, thus putting the side out.

The Tyroners came in with Wertz at the bat. Fahnestock and Woodcock formed the battery for the Bellefonters. Wertz got his base on balls and managed to steal to second, but there he stayed as the next three men at the bat were struck out. It was now plainly evident that the home team had a snap. It was nothing to strike the straight balls thrown by Metcalf, but it was a little hard to "get onto" Woodcock's "slow droppers" or "swift highers."

In the second inning the home team scored another run and the Tyrone team none. In the third inning our fellows piled up three more runs against Tyrone none. The latter made their first run in the 4th inning when they did succeed in making 2, and one in the fifth completed their score. The Bellefonte piled up run after run until they had a total of 12. The Tyroners were good in the field; they made some very good catches, otherwise they would have been simply overwhelmed. Some heavy batting was done and several home runs made by the home team. Quigley had the most runs scored to his credit, but Orbison did about the hardest batting. Following is the standing of the nines respectively:

The Shamokin Fair.

The Shamokin Agricultural and Driving Park Association has been indefatigable in its efforts to make the annual meeting one of the most notable events in Central Pennsylvania. During the year a club house has been built, It is fitted up with all the conveniences of a first-class hotel. The track has been pronounced by experts to be one of the finest in the country, The grand stand has been greatly improved, and the space underneath has been fitted up conveniently for the exhibition of goods by merchant, manufacturer or any one who desires to compete for the premiums offered by the association. It is urged that farmers and others who desire to make exhibits, have them on the ground Tuesday, which will be given over to the reception committee by the management, A large number of horses have already been entered for the races, and so far as this portion of the program is concerned success is already assured.

In addition to the regular features, the management has entered into a contract with Miss Nellie Burk for a daily performance by her Roman hippodrome company. This in itself is enough to fill the park with people. The outfit consists of fifteen thoroughbred horses, a pack of English greyhounds and a score or more equestrians. The company will give Roman chariot races, four horses abreast, running and hurdle races and as a special feature Miss Burk mounted upon her favorite horse, will race with a pack of greyhounds, There is no sham about these races there is a pride involved, with both horses and men, that inclines them to do their level best.

The fair will open Tuesday, September 23, and close Friday following. It is expected that ex-Senator Delamater and ex-Governor Pattison, the Republican and Democratic candidates for governor, will be present during the exhibition.

THE FIGHT NEARLY OVER

Senators Advance the Tariff Bill to Third Reading.

RECIPROCITY AGREED TO.

Mr. Aldrich's Amendment Passed by a Vote of 37 to 28 — Text of the Amendment in Full—Other Action Taken.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The senate met at 10 o'clock and resumed consideration of the tariff bill, the pending question being on Mr. Gibson's amendment to reduce the sugar test from 80 degs. by the polariscope to 76 degs. Rejected.

In answer to an inquiry from Mr. Edmunds, the presiding officer, Mr. Ingalls, stated that unless otherwise instructed by the senate the chair would hold that beginning with the day's consideration of the bill the action of the senate would be without debate, and that the asking or answering an inquiry would be debate and therefore inhibited.

Voting on Reciprocity.

Half a dozen minor amendments had been proposed and balloted on when Mr. Aldrich moved on behalf of the committee the reciprocity amendment proposed by him on Sept. 1. Mr. Evarts moved as a substitute for it the amendment proposed by him at Monday night's session, and which merely directs the president to communicate the facts to congress. Mr. Evart's amendment was rejected. Yeas, 30; nays, 34. All the Democrats voted in the affirmative, as did also Messrs. Dolph, Evarts and Sanders on the Republican side.

Mr. Edmunds also moved a modification of Mr. Aldrich's amendment authorizing the president to remit under certain conditions taxes on sugars, molasses, coffee and teas imported from countries where duties are abolished on the principal agricultural products of the United States. Rejected—yeas, 6; nays, 50.

The six affirmative votes were given by Messrs. Cameron, Davis, Edmunds, Frye, Paddock and Plumb.

Mr. Edmunds moved to strike out of Mr. Aldrich's amendment the words "on and after the first day of July, 1891." Rejected—yeas, 29; nays, 34.

Mr. Gibson moved to insert wool in Mr. Aldrich's amendment. Rejected—yeas, 19; nays, 38.

Mr. Gray moved as a substitute for Mr. Aldrich's amendment a section directing the president without further legislation to declare the ports of the United States free and open to all the products of any country of the American hemisphere upon which no export duties are imposed, whenever and so long as the government of such country admitted to the ports thereof, free of all national, provincial, municipal and other taxes, the flour, corn meal, preserved meats, fish, vegetables, rice, lumber, agricultural implements, machinery, vessels or boats of iron, steel or wood, etc., products of the United States. Rejected by a party vote—yeas, 26; nays, 38.

Mr. Aldrich's amendment was then adopted—yeas, 37; nays, 28.

All the Democrats and two Republicans —Edmunds and Evarts—voted against the reciprocity amendment.

The Amendment.

The amendment as finally agreed to reads as follows:

That with a view to secure reciprocal trade with countries producing the following articles, and for this purpose, on and after the first day of July, 1891, whenever and so often as the president shall be satisfied that the government of any country producing and exporting sugars, molasses, coffee, tea and hides, raw and uncured, or any of such articles, imposes duties or other exactions upon the agricultural or other products of the United States, which in view of the free introduction of such sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides into the United States he may deem to be reciprocally unequal and unreasonable, he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to suspend, by proclamation to that effect, the provisions of this act relating to the free introduction of such sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides, the production of such country, for such time as he may deem just, and in such case and during such suspension duties shall be levied, collected and paid upon sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides, the product of or exported from such designated country as follows, namely: All sugars not above No. 13 Dutch standard in color shall pay duty on their polariscopic tests as follows, namely:

All sugars not above No. 13 Dutch standard in color, all tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice or of beet juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above 75 degs., seven-tenths of one cent per pound; and for every additional degree or fraction of a degree shown by the polariscope test, two-hundredths of one cent per pound additional.

All sugars above No. 13 Dutch standard in color shall be classified by the Dutch standard of color and pay duty as follows, namely:

All sugar above No. 13 and not above No. 16 Dutch standard of color, 1⅜ cents per pound.

All sugar above No. 16 and not above No. 20 Dutch standard of color, 1⅝ cents per pound.

All sugars above No. 20, Dutch standard of color, 2 cents per pound.

Molasses testing above 56 degs., 4 cents per gallon.

Sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty either as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscopic test.

On coffee 3 cents per pound.

On tea 10 cents per pound.

Hides, raw or uncured, whether dry, salted or pickled, Angora goat skins, raw, without the wool, unmanufactured, asses' skins, raw or unmanufactured, and skins, except sheep skins with the wool on, 1½ cents per pound.

Other Amendments Agreed To.

Mr. Aldrich offered an additional section providing that the sugar schedule and the bounty paragraphs shall take effect on the 1st of March, 1891, and that prior to the 1st of February, 1891, sugars may be refined in bond without payment of duty. Agreed to.

Various other amendments were offered by Mr. Aldrich, and the committee amendment to the paragraph placing upon the free list all sugars not above No. 16 D. S., which had been passed over without action, was taken up. The amendment was to substitute No. 13 for No. 16. It was agreed to—yeas, 35; nays, 25. The Republicans who voted in the negative were Allison, Cullom, Davis, Mitchell, Moody, Pierce, Sherman, Spooner, Teller, Wilson, of Iowa, and Wolcott. The Democratic vote was about evenly divided.

Mr. Plumb moved an amendment imposing a tax of 3 per cent. on dividends of corporations. Rejected—yeas, 26; nays, 31. Mr. Plumb moved an amendment providing that where the existence of trusts or combinations to control the production or sale of any article is proved to the satisfaction of a court similar articles of foreign production are to be admitted free of duty. Rejected—yeas, 27; nays, 33.

Debate Closed.

Mr. Plumb offered an amendment for the appointment of a commission of five disinterested persons to be known as the "customs commission," with a permanent office in the city of Washington. Agreed to—yeas, 31; nays, 30. On this vote there were no party lines observed. Mr. Daniel offered an amendment that the duty on leaf tobacco suitable for cigar wrappers shall not take effect until July 1, 1891. Rejected.

The bill was then reported to the senate and all the amendments that had been adopted in the committee of the whole were agreed to in the senate except those on which separate votes were demanded. The first of them was Mr. Plumb's amendment for a customs commission, on which Mr. Gorman demanded a separate vote. The amendment was agreed to—yeas, 31; nays, 29.

The commission is to be composed of five disinterested persons, to be appointed by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate. The commissioners are to continue in office six years, but any of them may be removed by the president for inefficiency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office. No more than three of them are to be appointed from the same political party.

They are to have a salary of $7,000, with traveling and other necessary expenses. They are to be provided with a clerk, stenographer and messenger and such other clerical assistants as they may require. Their permanent office is to be in the city of Washington.

By a vote of 38 to 28, a strict party vote, the senate ordered the tariff bill to a third reading and engrossment. The bill was ordered printed with the amendments, and the senate at 2:53 p. m. went into executive session.

FRED DOUGLASS SPEAKS.

He Addresses a Meeting of Colored People in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 10.—Hon. Frederick Douglass, the United States minister to the island of Hayti, was an attendant at the colored camp in Wayman's Grove, and delivered an address to a small but enthusiastic audience. He said:

"There was a time when we could not assemble as we do today to deliberate and contemplate the relation existing between us and our citizens generally. A great change has taken place among the colored race—vast and wonderful has it been. We are living among scenes that remind us of a new earth. The time has come when we can look our fellow citizens in the face and share in the glory of the country. We who came through toil and suffering know this."

Speaking of Hayti Mr. Douglass said he was somewhat tongue tied, because he was still in office and was going back. In reference to the negro question there he said that 100 years ago Hayti was surrounded by slavery, and the whole Carribbean sea was reddened by the curse. The negro was a slave everywhere under every nation in the islands of the West Indies. But they had the manhood to rise and drive out the men who tyrannized over them. "These 'degraded, stupid negroes' were not only able to assert their liberty, but to organize a government, which they have carried on for eighty-seven years. They have sent their ministers to all Christian lands, and Hayti has never been known to break a treaty. Some of the papers said, 'Send a white man as minister to Hayti,' for the people of that country would resent a negro. Well, there is always a demand made for a white man when there is $5,000 attached to the office. The negroes there have shown me every courtesy, and I have not the slightest reason to complain. I believe the press has become reconciled to my presence in the office, except those that have a candidate for it, and they give out that I am going to resign. At them I fling the old adage, 'Few die and none resign,' and that I am going back about Oct. 1."

Knights of the Mystic Chain Meet.

READING, Pa., Sept. 10.—The Ancient Order of the Knights of the Mystic Chain of Pennsylvania have commenced their annual state convention here. Reports show that the order has a membership of 15,000 in the state, and that it is established in nineteen states. A street parade took place in the afternoon, several Philadelphia lodges participating.

His Neck Broken by an Elevator.

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—Heyman Howitz, a Hebrew, aged about 20 years, while ascending in the elevator at 75 Summer street to deliver several bundles of coats to Hall & Newhall, fell in a faint and his head was caught between the elevator floor and the top of an outside window. His neck was broken and he died instantly.

Senseless Run on an Indiana Bank.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 10.—A rumor that the St. Joseph County Savings bank was about to close its doors gradually gained currency, and when the bank opened at 1 o'clock for the afternoon business a run began and continued until after banking hours. All demands were met. The bank is one of the most solid in Indiana.

Alleged Trouble Among the Knights.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—A Pittburg, Pa., special says that a rumor prevails there among labor men that in the event of the re-election of General Master Workman Powderly, local assembly 300, window glass workers, will leave the Knights of Labor. The principal causes of dissatisfaction are said to be the mismanagement of the Central railroad difficulty, and too lavish expenditure of money by the general officers of the order, especially in the matter of salaries.

A Passenger Pursued the Robber.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—A special from Auburn, Cal., to The Chronicle says: The Georgetown stage was stopped yesterday near Greenwood while on its way to Auburn by a masked highwayman and robbed. He secured the Wells-Fargo express box, but it is not known how much the box contained. One of the passengers named Thomas Stevens borrowed a gun and started after the robber, but with what result is not yet known.

THE MAINE ELECTION.

Republicans Secure a Plurality of Nearly 19,000.

SPEAKER REED'S SUCCESS.

His Majority Is About Doubled—What He Thinks of the Result—The Figures for Governor Burleigh and His Opponents.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 10.—Maine has re-elected Governor Burleigh and Congressmen Reed, Dingley, Boutelle and Milliken. Speaker Reed scores a personal triumph in obtaining a plurality of about 4,600 in his district, the largest ever given to a candidate for congress. In 1888 Mr. Reed's plurality was about 1,500. His friends have taken possession of the city and parade the streets with banners and bands of music. The vote in Portland for Burleigh was 3,683; Thompson, 2,146; Clark, 158; scattering, 36; Reed, 3,751; Frank, 2,188; scattering, 118; Reed's plurality, 1,563, the largest ever given a member for this district. One Republican representative to the legislature, Cunningham, is defeated, Guptill winning by nine votes.

GOVERNOR BURLEIGH.

Speaker Reed's Opinion.

Speaker Reed left for Washington at 9 o'clock in the morning. The deductions which he draws from his victory on Monday are given in some remarks of his to a New York Sun correspondent:

"I confess to having felt a deep solicitude as to the result in this district. So great a plurality was given me at the last election owing to local causes which our own people will comprehend that almost any reasonable result was liable to misunderstanding. In our off year men do not come out on the majority side, and the short, very short campaign we have had could not have reached them in the regular way. To have received in such a year so large a plurality is something which has more than a personal significance. There have been cast for me many Democratic votes. I do not in the least flatter myself that they were cast for me personally. They were put into the ballot box to show the world that some men outside of my own party applaud the idea that the house of representatives ought to be a business body carrying out the wishes of the American people."

How the Vote Stands.

The Republican plurality will be about 19,000 this year, which is 1,000 ahead of the presidential and a gain of 5,300 over 1886, the last off year. Then the vote stood: Republican, 68,991; Democratic, 55,289; Prohibition, 3,808; scattering, 23; Republican plurality, 13,702.

The Prohibition vote comes united with the scattering or omitted, so it is classed as scattering, and may be considerably larger.

All the present members of congress have been re-elected by good sized majorities. Mr. Reed's is nearly doubled. The legislature will be full as strongly Republican as it was last year, when it stood 125 Republican to 26 Democratic. In this county the officers are mostly Republican.

Burleigh gets 40,385 in 210 towns; Thompson, 24,427; Clark, 861; scattering, 958. The same towns in 1888 gave a Republican vote of 50,351; Democratic, 37,144; Prohibition, 1,276; scattering, 1,089. Republican plurality, 13,508 against 13,007; Republican gain, 501. If the towns to hear from fall off in the same proportion the final vote should stand: Republican, about 64,500; Democratic, 45,500; scattering, 3,000; total, 113,000.

The Advertiser estimates that the legislature will stand: Senate—Republicans, 28; Democrats, 3. House—Republicans, 117; Democrats, 34.

Congratulations from the President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The following telegram has been received here:

"Hon. T. B. Reed, Speaker House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

"I very heartily congratulate you and your colleagues in congress from Maine upon the generous popular endorsement you have received.

"BENJAMIN HARRISON.

"CRESSON, Pa., Sept. 9, 1890."

Fiends at Work Near Boston.

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—An attempt was made during the evening to wreck the west bound Rockport train, No. 120, of the Boston and Maine railway, at West Lynn, between Long Bridge and Taugus River Junction.

William F. Murdock, who resides at No. 24 Light street, was walking on the track, when he found a thirty-three foot steel rail lying at right angles across both tracks at a point several hundred yards from the West Lynn depot.

Finding the rail too heavy for him to move he took a red light from a neighboring switch, and with it stopped the train within two car lengths of the obstruction. It took the combined efforts of four trainmen to remove the rail.

No clew to the perpetrator was found. Murdock was taken to Boston, where he told his story to the police, who are now investigating the matter.

An Old Lady's Frightful Death.

SHARON, Mass., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Mahala K. Paul, residing at 13 Cotting street, Boston, a widow, aged 89 years and quite deaf, was killed while attempting to cross the railroad track here by the 4:15 p. m. train out of Boston. She was thrown in the air and her clothing caught on the flagstaff on the front of the engine, where she hung, her head and feet dragging, till the train was stopped. Her left leg was cut off, her arms broken and her ribs crushed. She lived about two hours.

The Cotton Belt Strike Ended.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 10.—The Picayune's Corsicana, Tex., dispatch says the committee of Cotton Belt employes appointed at the engineers and conductors' meeting at Tyler on Sunday night has sent a dispatch to the railroad agent there stating that the strike was ordered off unconditionally. This has done away with all the trouble. J. H. Strapp and Tom Smith, two of the strikers, have been arrested for interfering with the operations of the road. Trains are moving as usual. Many of the old hands are out, and new hands fill their positions.

Grape Juice For Sickness.

The art of cultivating the Oporto vines and fermenting the Oporto Grape into wine in this country, and of preserving the Grape Juice fresh without fermentation has been brought to a greater degree of perfection by Mr. Alfred Speer, of Passaic, N. J., than by any other person: in fact, he was the pioneer in introducing and advertising Native Wines. He has purchased hundreds of tons of grapes, besides his own vintage. Mr. Speer's success has arisen from the strict purity and valuable properties of his wine for invalids and feeble persons, and his reputation extends around the world.

—If Sunday night was not a hot night and a most uncomfortable one for sleeping then the writer is no judge of weather. At ten o'clock it was hot; at half past eleven it was scalding and at one o'clock it was boiling and then it kept right along boiling for a couple of hours. An ice house would have been a warm place to have slept in on Sunday night.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE SABBATH SHOOL CONVENTION.

Twenty-Sixth Annual Session to be Held [at New Castle.

The twenty sixth annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School association will be held in the city of New Castle, Lawrence county, commencing at 2 p. m., Tuesday, Sept. 30, 1890, and continue through Wednesday and Thursday, October 1st and 2d, three sessions held each day.

This convention will be of special interest to all Sabbath school workers interested in inter denominational organization, following as it does upon the great international convention of last June in Pittsburgh, one result of which is a renewed activity in a large number of our counties. It will be of special value also to officers and teachers in the Sabbath school, because of the unusual amount of normal teaching which will be given. In at least one of the sessions the convention will be divided into sections for the discussion of topics pertaining to primary and Bible class work, and the superintendents office.

Among the prominent workers who will be present, are Mr. William Reynolds, of Peoria, Illinois; ex-president of the international convention, Rev. Drs. J. A. Worden, of Philadelphia; R. S. Holmes, of Pittsburg, and others.

Each county is entitled to ten delegates, and each city of 10,000 inhabitants or over, ten additional delegates. For counties or cities not organized the chairman of the state executive committee will issue credentials upon receipt of application therefor, the application to be accompanied by the endorsement of any minister or pastor.

All delegates will be entertained and should notify Rev. M. H. Calkins, 59 Neshannock avenue, New Castle, as soon as possible. Delegates will pay full fare going and secure a certificate from the agent at the starting point. At New Castle they will receive orders which will entitle them to return over the same route at one-third fare: The reduced rates of fare are open to all persons desiring to attend the convention—delegates or not.

Rev. M. H. Calkins, will answer in formation.

Let us go to this convention with the purpose to reap, if possible, the benefits, resulting from the late international convention, which are many and great, and have already been felt in all parts of our state. Pray for the blessing of God upon the work of our association, and come up in person "to the help of the Lord against the mighty.' WM. S. RUSS. Chairman Executive Committee, Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association.

ALTOONA, Pa., September 5.

—Davy Crockett September 12th.

—Nordeck September 11th,

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E Hurd of Groton, S D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles: it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottle free at W. C. Keplinger & Co's. drug store, regular size 50c and $1.00.

The Only Opportunity.

Friday night Mr. Frank Mayo will present his picturesque and political "Davy Crockett" in Garman's New Opera House. It is probable that his present visit will be the last for many years, arrangements are in negotiation for a tour of Australia, New Zealand and the East Indies. If we have to say "Goodby, Davy," it will be regretfully, for we can hardly afford to lose "Crockett," or Frank Mayo. There is no play anything like the former, and no actor to replace the latter. For upward of twenty-five years Mayo has represented the romantic school without a rival. Long before Murdock wrote his beautiful "Idyl of the Backwoods," and when star actors of America were very few. Frank Mayo's name was well known from Boston to San Francisco. That so many of his years of success have been devoted to one play is not his fault. 'Crockett' was a gold mine, and the local managers demanded it. Some few years ago the sterling actor made a heroic effort to get away from the play that has made him a fortune, and although he has given us some excellent productions and with marked success still the public have not forgotten his hero in buckskins, and never will, and so long as Mayo's name appears on a poster there will be a demand for "Davy Crockett."

The Prohibition Campaign.

The Philipsburg Journal says: The Prohibition party met on Thursday evening at Gray's hall, for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements for the fall campaign. There was a most encouraging attendance of Prohibitionists as well as others who had not previously identified themselves with that party.

J Zeigler, the county chairman, gave a spirited address pointing out that the outlook was never more cheering than at the present time. Methods for working was discussed and the club was never in better shape nor in a more promising condition than at the present time Resolves were made that every legitimate opportunity should be embraced to make a good show at the polls, to assist in causing the total number of voters who shall record in favor of Prohibition to make both of the other parties feel that the Prohibitionists will have to be recognized in the future politics of the nation.

The following officers were elected: President, Dr. I Guss; vice president, William Miller; secretary, Walter Scott; treasurer, Thomas piper.

A very respectable sum of money was raised in the room to form the neuclus of a fund for campaign purposes.

When I was Sick!

My room looked like a drug store, I had so many bottles in it. The more I dosed, the worse off I was. Finally, I paid my doctor and told him he needn't come any more. I was troubled with Chronic Rheumatism, and couldn't get out of bed alone. Six bottles of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—Benj Fitch, Adams House. Boston.

Eupepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by W. C. Keplinger & Co's druggist.

Death of William B. Daley.

Special to the NEWS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 6, 9.45 a. m.—William H. Daley, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Daley, died here this morning. The funeral will occur at Howard, Pa., on Monday, afternoon.

A Brawny Bargee at the Helm.

To-day it is raining in torrents. He knows by experience the value of a "Fish Brand Slicker." It is his sole article of dress, and to him worth drawers, shirt, coat, vest, and pants. He'll tell you tales by the hour of storms lasting days and nights when that "Slicker" made up the whole difference between comfort and misery; and all for a mere trifle from his week's pay. Why don't you buy one for yourself? To realize how little it costs, think how long it lasts. It will outwear four suits of clothes. Better get one to-day, before you forget it. A day's delay may cause a month of sickness, and cost a hundred times the price of a Slicker. Beware of worthless imitations, every garment stamped with the "Fish Brand" Trade Mark. Don't accept any inferior coat when you can have the "Fish Brand Slicker" delivered without extra cost. Particulars and illustrated catalogue free.

His Ignorance Cost Me $150.00!

I was sick abed for three months. The doctor said I had Prolapus Uteri, which was untrue. He didn't try to cure me but wanted to make a $1 50 every day. My uncle is a druggist, and he told me to turn the doctor off and try Sulphur Bitters I did so and five dollars worth of Sulphur Bitters cured me of general weakness and debility. —Mrs S——, New Haven.

THEY PLAYED BALL.

The Cuban Giants Knocks Out the Bellefonte by a Score of 18 to 5.

It was widely circulated that all who would go to the ball ground on Tuesday afternoon would witness a fine game of ball. Accordingly a large crowd went out, payed their quarter and took a seat on the grand stand—the bank next to the fence. Game was called shortly after 2 o'clock, with the home team first at the bat. They did not score a run, and neither did their opponents the first time they were at the bat.

But the second inning when the Cuban Giants came to the bat, and no runs had yet been made, they concluded to play ball," and they did so. From that time to the ending of the game they had a regular "snap" of it, piling up run after run until at the ending of the game they had the magnificent score of 18 runs marked to their credit, while the Bellefonte boys could only count five. It was feared at one time that they would be shut out entirely as it was about the fifth or sixth inning before a run was made. It was only in the last two innings when the additional four runs were scored.

The Bellefonte boys could play well enough if they had more practice together, but as it was they were not in good practice. The Cuban Giants were always there in every run that was made.

If you find you are going down hill in point of health. Failing strength, impaired digestion and assimilation are the marks of decline. Check these and other indications of premature decay with the grand vitalizer and restraining tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Beginning at the fountain head, the stomach, the Bitters remedies its inefficiency, corrects its errors, and sets it vigorously at work. The digestive organ is thus enabled to thoroughly separate from the food its nutritive principles, which the blood assimilating, is enriched. Thus is the system nourished, and being nourished, strengthened, and abnormal waste of its tissues stayed. Appetite, the power to rest well, a regular habit are also re-established, and the various functions move once more in their natural and healthful groove. The Bitters, moreover, is a specific cure for and preventive of malarial complaints, rheumatism, biliousness and kidney troubles. tf.

First a He, Then a She.

Delbert Reynolds was born a boy 2 years ago at San Rafael. A short time ago he married a respectable blacksmith at Alena, and blossomed forth as Belle Hardman, a loving wife. Her husband is willing to make affidavit that she is a true woman, and the mother, Mrs. Reynolds is prepared to swear that it was born a boy, and remained so for twenty years, doing boy's and man's work and associating with males as a rule.

The transformation covered a period of eighteen months, and a San Francisco doctor, while amazed, vouches for the marvelous change of sex as an absolute fact.

The only solution of the problem will be for he, she or it to become a mother. In the meantime the doctors, the neighbors and all the country round are asking, "What is it?"

—That venerable lady Mrs. Ruth Armor, was 91 years old on Sunday, the 7th of September. There are not very many persons in Bellefonte who have seen 91 summers come and go. The life and experience of Mrs. Armor if written up would present a wonderful pen picture. May she life many years more.

Eczema From Childhood.

When an infant my body broke out all over with an eruption of rash, which became more aggravated as I grew older. From early childhood until I was grown my family spent a fortune trying to cure me of the disease. Every noted physician in our section was tried or consulted. When I came of age I visited Hot Springs Ark., and was treated there by the best medical men, but was not benefited. After that, under the advice of a noted specialist, I tried the celebrated Clifton Springs, New York, without any good results. When all things had failed I determined to try S S S., and in four months was entirely cured. The terrible Eczema was all gone, not a sign left; my general health built up, and I have never had any return of the disease. I have since recommended S S S to a number of friends for skin diseases, eruptions etc., and have never known of a failure to cure.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered."

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is Peculiar to Itself

Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

Again it affords us much pleasure to be able to record the fact that the Pittsburg Exposition opened its doors promptly as advertised. The many things to be seen are worthy of much of our space, but we will dwell only on one exhibit, the only one of its kind at the great show. Well may we say it is worthy of comment. We refer with pride to the display of Mr Max Klein, the wholesale liquor merchant. There you will find a complete distillery in full operation. His Silver Age Rye stands on a pyramid high enough to overlook all other displays; the bbs, and cases show at once the extent of his trades, conveying the impression that he ships to all parts of the country. His Pennsylvania Rye Whiskies, his imported and domestic wines, brandies and cordials are prominent features. No other liquor house in the country would dare to compete with him in making a display, and no other house in his line can or will sell goods as pure and at such reasonable prices. You can leave orders at his stand or apply to him direct for his complete catalogue and price list. Such a house should receive the custom of all who wish fair treatment and to Max Klein 82, Federal St., Allegheny, Pa., we can recommend you.

How Good Roads Pay.

Farmers often complain of the rates charged by transportation companies, but it would be easy to demonstrate that the carriage of farm products by rail and steamer all combined costs much less than the hauling of these products over country roads from the farm to the railway station. This is not the place to enforce the argument for good roads by showing how much more rapidly and cheaply this hauling could be done if the roads were all good and in good condition. But certainly, it worth while to invite the attention of country landholders to the value of attractive roads. The first impression which a visitor receives of any region comes through its roads, and as he leaves, his last experience is on the road over which he is driven to the station. Every day, when he is not shut within doors, he makes use of the roads and paths, and although, he may not realize the fact, a large portion of his pleasure or discomfort is due to their influence. Good roads pay by reducing bills for repairs of wagons and carriages, by saving time, by economizing horse power, and in many other directions. The absolute money value of attractive roads to any country community is just as real and positive. They give an added value to every acre of land in the districts which they traverse—Garden and Forest.

A VERDICT FOR THE DEFENDANT

IN THE CASE OF TYRONE MINING AND MANUFACTURING COMPANY VS. JAMES CROSS.

The big ejectment case was ended this morning when the jury brought in a verdict in favor of the defendant. The verdict was in direct opposition to the charge of the court. The case in question is one of ejectment action for which was first brought in 1884. The land in question is about one hundred acres located in Half Moon township and on which are the Juniata Ore Mines. The entire case is involved in an old survey and title and it is one of those intricate questions that it is very hard to decide even in court.

The case was first tried in 1886 and since that time has gone through the Supreme Court twice and been tried in the lower court three times. The present defendant won it twice in the lowe courts and the Supreme court decided in his favor once. Already the costs amoun to thousands of dollars.

The present trial was begun on Monday afternoon and, consequently, has lasted all week. Some of the best legal talent in the State were engaged and the best land Judge in Pennsylvania Judge Krebs, of Clearfield, was on the bench. Orvis, Bower & Orvis conducted the case for the plaintiffs and Murray o Clearfield, Peale, of Williamsport, and Love, of Bellefonte, for the defendent

The case went to the jury on Friday afternoon at 4.18 and it was between 11 and 12 at night when they agreed on a verdict, which was then sealed and brought into court this morning at 9 o'clock. The plaintiff's, through their attorneys, have filed a motion for a new trial which was at once entered and will be argued in the near future before Judge Krebs.

COSTLY SWEETS.

MONEY SQUANDERED UPON CONFECTIONS BY EXTRAVAGANT GIRLS.

When a West Philadelphia cab halted at Eighth and Chestnut streets, two stylishly dressed young ladies alighted. One had eyes of dazzling darkness, and the other orbs of cerulean blue.

Both with all the speed that dignity could properly assume entered a near-by confectionery establishment.

'Give me a half pound of candied violets and rose leaves, please,' said she of the Oriental eyes.

'And I,' said the other, 'will have a half pound of gold dragees.'

The pretty saleswoman, with a stately inclination of her head, hastened to fill the order.

'Do you know,' said the saleslady, when the two artistocratic customers had swept out, 'that a small fortune can be spent in candies? Violet and rose leaf candies cost $5 a pound. Gold dragees cost——'

'But what is a good dragee?' interrupted the Daily News reporter.

'A gold dragee is nothing more or less than a plain round candy dipped in gold.

'It seems odd, don't you think, to eat gold. But then,' naively, 'we must all eat something. Silver dragees are the same as gold, the metal being only changed. They readily command $4 a pound, while the gold ones bring $10 a pound. Rather expensive, you think? Well, yes. But then they are readily salable. One lady who went to Europe last summer bought ten pounds of gold dragee."

'How about dinner favors?'

'Dinner favors are very expensive. In dainty designs of banjos, guitars, violins and everything æsthetic and beautiful they are to be ordered at prices ranging from 50 cents to $2 each. Cap mottoes for dinners cost from 25 cents to $3 each.

'And the satin boxes which contain them?'

'Oh,' replied the pretty maid, with a merry twinkle in her lustrous brown eyes, 'they are cheap! Oh, yes, cheap You buy them at all prices from $5 to $60 apiece. Of course, when painted and embroidered and filled with choicest candies they are fit presents for a sovereign. Frequently specially ordered designs are painted upon the rich confectionery caskets.

'But, continued the interesting little lady, "sterling silver bonbonieres are of the most exquisite designs. They range in price from $15 to $25. The choicest of these bonbonieres contain Italian mint drops, a rare and highly-odorous candy. Bonbonieres for holding dragees are usually made of handsome enamel and easily sell for $20 a piece."

'Are fruit candies expensive?'

'Fine fruit candies sell for about 85 cents a pound, chocolates and the finest bon-bons being about the same price. Caramel caps and drops only cost 50 cents a pound. In some places you can get them for half that price. Salted almonds, a great favorite with school girls, are worth $1 per pound, while cream cherries sell for twenty cents less. Chocolate creams, jellies and nuts are worth 80 cents a pound. Satin bags for candies when filled bring $7 without effort. Rests for chairs in Oriental and antique designs in lace and handpainting are superb.

'When filled with bags of candy they cost 14. So you see one can easily spend a fortune on candies,' concluded the young lady as she advanced to wait upon a newly arrived customer.

The Man With the Fishing Pole.

A citizen with a fish pole over his shoulder was going up Cass avenue yesterday, when a stranger called out:

Have any luck?

Fifty feet further and a second inquired:

Are they bitting now?

And at the next corner a third stopped him and asked:

Say, what'll you take for a ton of 'em?

A fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh had their say, and the eight bore down on him with:

I tell you, old fellow, you may laugh at the idea of spitting on bait, but it brings luck and I can prove it.

Speaking to me? queried the man with the pole.

Certainly.

What do you take me for?

Why, you are going a fishing?

Who said so?

Haven't you got a fish pole?

Suppose I have! If I saw you carrying a bar of soap home would I argue that you were going to do the family washing?

But aren't you going a fishing?

No, sir! This pole is to punch the sparrows' nests out of the eaves of my houses. Mighty funny how many people there are in this world who are interested in other peoples business.

FARM NOTES.

Nothing is better to prevent loss of ammonia from the manure heap than soapsuds. Keep the heap well saturated, and make holes in the heap so that the soapsuds can pass down to the bottom of the heap. Chemical action is facilitated, but there are formations of salts that prevent loss.

A crop of weeds removes from the soil as much of the elements of fertility as a crop of grain, and exhausts the land just as quickly. Do not grow weeds. Plow them under as soon as they take possession of the land, by which process they are returned to the soil from whence they came.

Kerosene is fatal to all kinds of insects, and for that reason it is frequently used as a preventive of damage by the cabbage worm. An objection to its use is that the kerosene impregnates the cabbage with its odor. The remedy is as obnoxious as the work of the cabbage worm.

Buttermilk is given but little value on dairy farms, and where there are pigs there are allowed the whole of the buttermilk. It is a very nourishing drink in the summer for the farm help, and is also excellent as an addition to the food of poultry of all kinds.

Use up all the old straw before beginning on the new. Cut it up fine with the fodder cutter and make bedding of it, and when it is added to the manure heap it will decompose easily and also assist in absorbing liquids.

Currant bushes should be hoed, which not only cleans out the weeds and grass, but renders the new growth more vigorous. A shovelful of well rotted manure, worked into the soil, will prove beneficial.

Leave a patch of turnips in the ground for a supply of spring greens. If covered with straw and cornstalks the turnips will keep in the ground all winter and begin growth early in the spring.

Manure is simply food that has undergone a change in the body of the animal. If food be thrown on the ground it will become manure to the soil and give beneficial effects; but the advantage in feeding the food to animals is that the food is sooner decomposed within the body of the animal, and therefore more immediately assumes that form by which it is taken up by plants. It also undergoes a further process of decomposition in the soil after it has passed through the animal. The more thoroughly decomposed the manure the more readily it is assimilated by plants.

It is estimated that some grain crops will take up as much as five hundred tons of water in one day on one acre of land. This is an enormous quantity, and teaches the importance of keeping the surface of the ground well cultivoted, as a loose top-soil prevents loss of moisture by evaporation. The roots of plants go down low into the soil and bring the water to the surface.

The practice of allowing grass and weeds to grow in the corn rows after the ears are formed is unwise. The corn land should be kept clean until the crop is harvested. Every weed that grows robs the corn of just that proportion of plant food and prevents larger ears and heavier grain, as well as distributing the seeds for a crop of weeds next season.

Spinach is usually sown in the fall The seed should go in the ground this month or September. The ground should be plowed and well worked, and the young plants protected from weeds until they are well under way. Spinach is a valuable winter crop, providing an early supply of greens in the spring at a time when no other kind can be had

In applying manures to the soil aim to give the kind that the soil most requires. This may be known by careful observation of the kind and quality of the goods allowed the stock. The value of manure depends entirely on the materials of which it is composed. It is impossible to make rich manure from inferior feeding material.

Both the stallion and the bull will be more serviceable for breeding purposes if made to take exercise in the shape of useful work of some kind. If the bull will not work in the shafts, or by the side of an ox, put him on the tread machine to furnish power for the cutter, or feed-mill,

HOW TO CATCH RATS.

An Invention That Causes Them to Assist in Killing Each Other.

The best course to take when the extermination of a colony of rats becomes a necessity is to make them help to distroy one another in the following manner;

A number of tubs proportionate to the quantity of rats in the place which it is desired to rid of them should be placed about, the middle of each occupied by a brick standing on end.

The bottom of these tubs should be covered with stout paper, upon which a dainty meal of bacon peel and other scraps dear to the rat palate figures—a sloping board giving the rodents facilities for partaking of it.

The feast should be renewed for several nights, so that all the rats in the neighborhood may get to know of the good food which is placed within such easy reach.

When it is judged that this policy has been pursued long enough the center of the brown paper should be cut in such a manner that any rat venturing upon it will be precipitated in the cold water below. [As the paper occupies the bottom of the tub, it would be interesting to know what space there is below the bottom to put the water in.—ED]

It might be thought that the result of this would be to capture a rat, or at the most two, for every tub prepared, but no such meagre reward for the trouble that has been taken need be feared.

The first rat to find his trust abused and himself struggling in the water at the bottom of the tub, soon recovers sufficiently from the shock to ascertain that there is a little island of refuge, onto which he scrambles and squeals his loudest for help.

Now, the squeal of a rat in trouble attracts every one of his kind within hearing, and very few moments will elapse before the victim of misplaced confidence is joined by his friends.

The newcomer is quick to discover the chance of escape from a watery grave that the brick offers, as was the original victim, but when he attempts to avail himself of its presence it becomes apparent that there is not room for more than one upon it.

The first comer resists with tooth and nail the efforts of his companion in trouble to dispossess him of his coigne of vantage, and the squeals which form an accompaniment to the fight for a footing attract more rats to the scene of the tragedy.

The conflict waxes more and more furious as rat after rat topples into the water, and by morning bedraggled corpses in plenty will gladden the eyes of the man whose losses at the teeth of rats have induced him to adopt this method of thinning their number.

Some years ago the plan described above was tried in a city warehouse, with the result that nearly three thousand rats were destroyed in a single night.

Proportions of the Body.

The proportions of the human body as given by the best authorities are as follows, the length of the head being the standard measurement: From the bottom of chin to breast bone, one-half length of head; from top to bottom of breast bone or sternum, one-half length of head; from bottom of sternum to beginning of lower limbs, two lengths; from thigh to bottom of knee, two lengths; from the bottom of the knee to the ankle, one and a half lengths; from the ankle to the ground, one-half length. Adding to these measurements one length for the head itself gives eight lengths for the proper height of the body of men.

Women are slightly shorter, the proportion of their head to the height being about as one to seven or seven and one-half. The arm from the armpit to the elbow joint is one and one-quarter times the length of the head, from thence to the wrist one and one-quarter, and from the wrist to the end of the middle finger three-quarters of the length of the head. The distance between the right middle finger and the same finger of the left hand is, when the arms are spread horizontally from the body, equal to the height of the figure. It follows, therefore, that the breadth of the body from armpit to armpit is one and one-half lengths of the head.

—Why so many bald-headed men are batchelors is thus explained by a recent writer: "There is a great deal of capillary attraction in love. Girls adore a handsome suit of glossy hair; it is lovely. And when a lover comes to woo her with the top of his head shining like a pumpkin he is at a disadvantage. Just as the words that glow and thoughts that burn begin to awaken in her bosom a sympathetic thrill, she may happen to notice two or three flies promenading over his phrenological organs, and all is over. Girls are so frivilous. She immediately becomes more interested in these flies than in all his lovely language. While he is pouring out his love and passion she is wondering how the flies manage to hold on to such a slippery surface."

ANOTHER MURDER

AN ENGLISHMAN, WHO GAVE THE NAME OF BILLY, QUARRELS WITH HARRY WATERHOUSE AND THEN

Murders Him in Cold Blood.

A Number of Eye Witnesses Give Their Testimony—The Man was Captured—Had Two Bulldog Revolvers—Full Particulars.

Another dastardly crime has been committed and another human soul has entered the presence of its Maker unannounced.

The cry of "murder" is at all times startling enough and, when the cry was heard on the streets of Bellefonte on *W*ednesday afternoon, it was horribly alarming, and yet seemed almost incredible. But the report was speedily confirmed and in a very few minutes a large crowd had gathered at the scene of the tragedy—on the pike leading to Collins' furnace, about midway between Gerberich's and Mitchell's—and where the victim yet lay with the damp dew of death fast gathering on his forehead,

Harry Waterhouse, an Englishman, about 46 years of age, and who was an employe in the Bellefonte Glass Works, was the victim of the tragedy. Another Englishman who gave the name of Billy and who was never seen in Bellefonte before Wednesday morning, was the man who did the shooting.

From all the facts in the case it appears that the two had met sometime in the forenoon when Waterhouse had referred to the man Billy as a "sharper" belonging to the Roger's circus. This seemed to at once anger the Englishman and he declared he would "get even" with Waterhouse. At this time the man was sober. Afterwards he drank considerable and all the time "laid in" with persons who live in this place and represented himself as coming here from Braddock with the intention of going to work in the glass works. It was about 3 o'clock when the shooting occurred and the particulars of the tragedy we will give in the story of four eye witnesses as told to the Distric Attorney.

John Rine, a moulder, who lives in Bellefonte, told the District Attorney as follows:

I met the man at the Brockerhoff House about 10.30 in the morning. I did not know him; told him my name was Rine and he said his name was not for anybody to know but that I might call him Billy. He was sober then but drank considerable liquor afterwards. I was with him constantly from that time on. When I met him at the Brockerhoff Harry Waterhouse and he were together. After dinner we paraded around town together for quite a while and finally started for the show ground. We stopped and sat on Mr. Garbrick's steps when he pulled out a revolver to show me, and also said he had another one. After sitting about five minutes we started on out. When about midway between Garbrick's and Mitchell's we met Waterhouse. Billy said here comes the old fellow. I tried to get him to keep quiet but he wouldn't. He first struck at Waterhouse when the latter hit him on the nose. I then took hold of Billy and threw him down. He said "Let me up, I want to get my gun." He struggled loose and got up. Harry ran back when the man said "you s— of a b— I'll shoot you," and fired. Then he ran.

Hayes Holder, who lives at Curtin's works, but who was in Bellefonte, said he was going out the railroad when he heard the fuss. He saw the man jerk loose from Rine, and saw him aim the revolver and saw it go off. Saw Waterhouse walk away and stagger and the man who did the shooting run away. Mr. Holder then stayed with Waterhouse.

Robt McKnight and Frank Crosthwaite were going out to the show. They passed Rine and the man Billy about midway between Gerberick's and Mitchell's. Waterhouse was with them and they were quarreling. When about thirty feet past them we heard a fuss and looked around to see them fighting. Saw the man strike at Waterhouse and Waterhouse strike at him. Saw Rine grab hold of him and hold him. Saw him break loose, take a revolver in his left hand and fire. Waterhouse was about 7 or 8 feet away and facing the man; he seemed to be backing away. Waterhouse staggered when the man ran up and tried to push him down. The man then turned and came toward us.

From the above it is apparent that no one of the bystanders anticipated anything of the kind and further that it was done so quick none had time to interfere. Rine started to run when he saw him shoot at Waterhouse. Immediately after he had attempted to push Waterterhouse down after he was shot, Billy started walking out the path, with the smoking revolver still in his hand. McKnight and Crosthwaite turned and ran back to the circus ground where they knew policeman Garis was, ran in and notified him. On their way out they passed a man on horseback and told him to notify the authorities in town, which he did by telling the district attorney. In the meantime the man who did the shooting had started to run and when he got opposite the farm house just beyond Isaac Mitchell's and right above the glass works, he dropped the revolver out of his left hand and the weapon was afterwards picked up by Geo. Kane, who saw the man drop it while running, and given to Detective Mullen. Billy proceeded out to the corner where the road turns up to the furnace and then, seeing the police and several others coming, he stopped and waited and when they came up submitted to arrest without offering any resistance whatever, only to feign intoxication. He acted too drunk to walk and a wagon was procured in which he was hauled to the Diamond. When he was taken out at that place he pulled a lot of small change out of his pocket and threw it on the ground. It was all picked up, however, by the authorities. On being taken to jail he was searched and on his person was found another revolver—a six shot American *B*ulldog of 38 calibre, all the chambers but one loaded—four more cartridges in his watch fob and $14.29 in money, a picture of John Rine but nothing whatever where with to identify him. He was then feigning so beastly drunk it was impossible to get a word out of him. The revolver with which the shooting was done was a 38 calibre 5 shot British Bulldog. Both revolvers were of the latest patent self-acting make.

In the meantime a crowd had gathered around Waterhouse but nothing could be done for the poor fellow and at 12 minutes of 4 o'clock he expired. The remains were taken to the borough poor house where a postmortem examination was held by Drs. Harris and Hayes. It was found that the ball had entered low down in the hollow of the neck and, taking a downward course, had severed the main artery, which crosses from the right side of the neck to the heart, and still descending found a lodging place in the cavity of the breast bone.

The man had just bled to death. The ball was secured and is now in the hands of the proper authorities. Owing to the fact that the cause of his death was so well known it was not necessary to hold a coroners' inquest.

A large silver hunting case watch, which was seen in possession of the prisoner, was subsequently found between where the shooting was done and where the arrest was made. It is generally believed to have been stolen from some one. It is a full jeweled Waltham movement, No. 2,217,232, and has a heavy gold plaited chain attached to it. Previous to starting for the show ground he had gone into Frank Galbraith's jewelry store and, claiming that the watch had stopped demanded that it be repaired as he alleged he had purchased it there and it was guaranteed. Such had not been the case, however.

Quite a number of rumors are afloat as to the murderers real identity. Some said he was a chain worker and worked at the chain works at Milesburg and that his name was John Sullivan. This is authoritatively denied however. The only real and apparently substantial story is that told by himself to John Rine when he said to call him "Billy." Inquiry at the jail this morning elicited the information that no authentic entry on the jail registry had yet been made. The man had told, however, that his name was Wilson and that he was from Braddock. It is generally believed, notwithstanding the denial to the contrary, that the man was a regular "pickpocket" following in the wake of the Rogers' circus, as no one can positively say that they saw him in Bellefonte prior to Wednesday morning, and it is asserted that he has been recognized as a man seen in Howard on Tuesday. One thing seems quite evident, and that is that he is a man with a "record" and before he stands in front of the Centre county bar to answer for his last crime the Centre county officials will have that "record" down "fine" as the saying is.

FUNERAL OF THE VICTIM.

The funeral of the victim of the above tragedy, Harry Waterhouse, occurred next afternoon at 4 o'clock from the poor house on Willow Bank street. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

A PRELIMINARY HEARING.

A preliminary hearing was given the prisoner Thursday C P Hewes, Esq. was the prisoner's counsel and would not allow him to answer any questions asked by the District Attorney only as to his name and residence, which was John Wilson, of Bradford. Only one witness was examined by, the District Attorney, and that was John Rine. This was sufficient to make out a commitment. There will be a habeas corpus hearing which will take place probably the latter part of this week.

—John Forcey, the victim of the almost fatal tragedy that was enacted last spring when a young man named John Veihdorfer stabbed Forcey with a knife almost killing him, has at last met death by a tree falling on him. The accident occurred on Wednesday evening near his home beyond Moshannon.

Arrangements have been made with the railroads for the transportation of all baggage and necessary camping equippage free. A baggage room has been provided on the ground at Headquarters, where baggage can be checked for the accommodation of visitors, for a mere nominal sum. Post office and telephone on the grounds.

The committee has arranged for a full supply of tents so that all who desire can secure tents at the following rates: Wall tents 9x10 feet $2.50. Tents should as much as possible be engaged in advance. All tents will be put up by committee ready for tent holders on arrival on ground.

The most delightful way to attend the picnic is to engage tents and camp. Each family to go together instead of so many going into one tent as to be uncomfortable.

Bring with you camp equippage, lamp, bed clothing and chaff ticks; straw will be furnished at cost.

There will be first-class boarding houses on the ground; the charges will be reasonable. Hotels near by.

Hacks will be run at stated hours each day from the picnic ground to the top of Nittany Mountain 1½ miles distant, which affords the most interesting and magnificent view of varied landscape in the State. Hacks will also run to Penn Cave, 3 miles distant the most wonderful, interesting and attractive subteranean wonder to be witnessed any where. It is entered by boat on a sheet of pure chrystal water about 1200 feet long, overhung with rock and ornamented by beautiful stalactites.

Hoping to hear from you early as to number of tents wanted.

LEONARD RHONE, Chairman, Centre Hall, Pa.

—The balcony railing for the Garman opera house has at last arrived and now it will be but a few days until the house will be entirely finished. When that time arrives the DAILY NEWS will give its readers a full description of it.

Davy Crockett.

Frank Mayo as Davy Crockett is known to the American people everywhere, and the names are now-a-days as intimately related to each other as are Joe Jefferson and Rip Van Winkle. Each is the special creation of each, and as there is but one Rip Van Winkle, so there is but one Davy Crockett.

Mr. Mayo is the ideal backwoodsman—a hero in buckskin. He is commanding in statue, an Apollo in appearance, strong as Hercules, and as tender as a woman; a face that for manly beauty is not surpassed, and an eye that can flash like the lightning, or melting in softness can look deepest love into a woman's eyes. All this with a voice sweetly musical, or loud in clear, ringing tones that thrill; makes him the very dream of the dramatist who limned the beautifully poetic character. That Davy Crockett should become famous is not surprising, like the Old Homestead, it is an idol of American life, pure and simple. Priest, poet or peasant, must all enjoy it, and the most vigorous opponent of the stage could not find a questionable line or situation in it. A more beautiful play than Davy Crockett never was written.

A Remarkable Play.

It is very easy to allow that no play of equal calibre was ever written that fastened itself so deeply on public favor as Davy Crockett. For 17 years the theatre-goer has feasted on it, and like Oliver Twist, "asks for more." Frank Mayo was well content to make a fortune out of his "Backwood's Idyl" and it was a long time before he realized the terrible fact that he was doomed to play Davy Crockett for life. Year after year the local managers marketing for attractions in New York clamored for Frank Mayo. He in return offered them a season of Shakespeare with a picked company of forty actors. In vain he offered other elaborate productions, and which, by the by, has done the admirable actor infinite credit. But the local managers protested 'our patrons want Davy Crockett.' Then Mayo raised his terms to such a fabulous figure that he thought the price would surely be refused. But no! Davy Crockett at any price." And so it will be so long as this robust actor can mend a saddle or pose a gun.

In reviving Davy Crockett Frank Mayo makes thousands of theatre-goers happy. It is hardly possible for any one to sit through the performance without feeling the influence of the author and actor. The story of the wooing of "Davy Crockett" is a poem that has for 17 years given pleasure and has been recognized as a distinctively American play. Abont five years ago Mayo placed it on the shelf to make room for other departures, many of which have been tried with varied success, but none ever reached the popularity of Davy Crockett It has made more money than many melodramas whose success has been much vaunted. Mayo is his own stage manager, and never permits any one to instruct his support but himself. Many famous actors and actresses now upon the stage are said to owe their finished training to Frank Mayo. There is one great charm about the performance of Davy Crockett, which is the noticable absence of all that is stagey or theatrical; the strong, free air of the forest sweeps through every scene and line, it is a picture of nature, full of health and strength. But the romance of love is there, as chivalrous and strong in buckskins as if it were mounted in tinsel and velvet. Miss Marie Burress, who plays "Eleanor Vaughn," Crockett's sweetheart, is said to be a young and extremely beautiful girl, and very talented.—In Garman's new Opera House Friday evening, September 12th.

A Quiet Wedding.

At 3,30 o'clock Wednesday morning the ceremony took place which united in marriage John T. Fowler, of Fowler Centre county, and Miss Elizabeth Buck, of Cross Roads, Huntingdon county Rev. George Elliott, of Bellefonte, was the officiating clergyman. The wedding took place at the palatial country seat of the groom at Fowler station, and was a quiet but elegant affair, only the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties being present.

On the noon train Mr. and Mrs. Fowler left for an extended wedding trip. They go first to Baltimore from which city they will proceed to Fredericksburg, Virginia, by boat, and other points of interest in the south will also be visited before their return in about ten days when they will take up their residence at Fowler. The groom is well known and esteemed not only in this section, but throughout the state for his amiable qualities, and his bride is a young lady who will be to him a worthy helpmeet is one that promotes digestion, improves the appetite, cleanses the liver, purifies the blood, and stimulates brain and nerves without injurious reaction, and one that may be taken alike by adult or infant. Profane compounds, made of vile rum or bad whiskey, sweetened and flavored, under the titles of bitters, tonics, &c, produce effects far worse than the disease for which they are taken.

The only true practical

Vinegar Bitters is a pure tonic, a nervine without being narcotic, a purifier without poison, a liver tonic without purging, and above all, a life-giving stimulant without alcohol. The only medicine with such powers in the world.

A GENUINE TEMPERANCE BEVERAGE,

far surpassing alcohol in any shape as a tonic it might be called

since it stimulates, invigorates and regulates digestion, nutrition, secretion, excretion, respiration, and all the functions whereby life is maintained—we literally take in vitality in spoonsful.

It is too much to assert that the equal of Vinegar Bitters does not exist, and no counterpart or compound with similar virtues has ever been known

CALIFORNIA,

If remarkable for nothing else, would be immortalized by the production of the medicinal fruits, roots and herbs of which this Bitters is composed. Many of them used by the Indians and the medical profession in the treatment of chills and fevers, rheumatism, catarrh, consumption, neuralgia, headaches, liver complaint, kidney disease, jaundice, gout, piles, boils, skin diseases, &c., &c., too numerous to mention, but easily understood when the action of the Bitters on the vital functions is remembered. DELAMATER in BELLEFONTE

FOR THREE HOURS HE IS BUSY SHAKING HANDS AND THEN TAKES A TRIP TO STATE COLLEGE.

IS WARMLY RECEIVED AT THAT PLACE AND MAKES HOSTS OF FRIENDS—INSPECTS ALL THE COLLEGE BUILDINGS—A COMPLETE ACCOUNT OF THE DAY.

Ever since it was announced that Senator Delamater would visit Bellefonte on Monday everybody was anxiously awaiting the arrival of the time when he would be here. Consequently when it was positively known that he would arrive in Bellefonte on the 9.32 train on Monday morning a large crowd had assembled to see him. He came escorted by County Chairman L. L. Brown, who had gone to Tyrone to meet him. They were met at the train by General D. H. Hastings and judging from the warm and almost brotherly greeting between the two one would never have taken them to be the principal competitors in the race for the gubernatorial nomination. The three gentlemen entered a carriage and were at once driven to the home of General Hastings where the Senator was formally received by a deputation of citizens, as follows: Messrs. E C Humes, D S Keller, John B Linn, John T Johnston and Col. J P Coburn.

The Senator remained at the home of the General, where he was called on by a few of Bellefonte's prominent citizens, until eleven o'clock when he repaired, arm in arm with the General, to room 39, Brockerhoff House, where a large crowd was already in waiting to receive him. From that time until 2 o'clock he was almost continuously shaking hands. Hundreds of republicans and many democrats called to pay their respects and grasp the hand of the man who will be Pennsylvania's next Chief Magistrate.

In the meantime Dr. George W. Atherton, President, had extended an urgent and very cordial invitation to the Senator to visit State College while here and Supt. Thomas A. Shoemaker, of the Buffalo Run railroad, had generously tendered the Senator a special train over the Buffalo Run road if he desired to make the trip. Consequently at 2 o'clock the Senator accompanied by Governor Beaver, General Hastings, Major B. T. Evans, and about thirty-five others specially invited, boarded the Superintendent's private car and were soon whirling on their way to the College. In just 34 minutes the train drew up at the College station and the party all alighted to find carriages and hacks waiting to carry them to the College.

Arriving there the Senator was met by Dr. Atherton and most of the college faculty while a large crowd had assembled from the surrounding community to greet the distinguished man. After a general handshake all were invited into the Chapel. Dr. Atherton, in a few well-chosen remarks, in which he referred to Mr. Delamater as a gentleman whose public course has been the upright, true and blameless course of a worthy public servant; and that he had the ability and the character to serve in any position, introduced Senator Delamater.

The Senator said; This part of the programme is a surprise to me. I have been enjoying all day a royal welcome; I had only anticipated shaking hands and getting personally acquainted. During my term as Senator I observed the work of your President in your behalf, laboring earnestly and hard to secure all the advantages possible and to bring within these walls, as teachers and instructors of the young good men and good women. I congratulate the State on this institution; it is a place to teach the young that life on a farm is not degrading but one of the noblest walks of life. During my official term I always voted for your appropriations and didn't have to make a face to do it, either. There are plenty of resources in this State to bring money into the State treasury to be divided out to such institutions as this; and if, by the grace of God and the votes of the people I shall become the Chief Magistrate of this State, I will do all for you I can.

Hastings was loudly called for and responded very briefly. He said: I promised Senator Delamater if he would visit us that we would please him; we would please him with what he would see, what he would hear and what we would give him to eat. We would show him the nicest country he ever visited; we would show him the best farms; the most stalwart men, the handsomest women, the sweetest girls and the loveliest babies. We would give him to drink some of the best and purest—water he ever tasted and more than that we would show him a place where they grew more politicians to the acre than in any other county in the State, most all of whom are now either in office or candidates for one. Mr. Delamater came and I am very glad he come. Not only have we proven to him all I said but he has been the means of bringing you all together here, in this church; more politicians than ever met together in a church in Centre county and some of whom probably never saw the inside of a church, at least for many years.

Governor Beaver was then called. The Governor spoke at length on the past and present advantages of the college and said that on Saturday the President of the United States had signed a bill which would give the State College this year an endowment of $16,000, and this amount would be increased one thousand dollars a year until it reached the magnificent sum of a $25,000 annual endowment fund.

After the Governor's address the party all separated and Dr. Atherton escorted Senator Delamater through and over all the College buildings and departments. The Senator expressed himself well pleased with what he saw. At five o'clock the Senator and his party re entered carriages and were driven to the train which was in waiting and soon they were speeding back to Bellefonte where they arrived at 6.30. Senator Delamater was then driven to the home of General Hastings where he took dinner and spent a couple hours pleasantly in a social way until the arrival of the 8,59 train on which he departed for Lock Haven, and thus ended the Senator's first, which is to be hoped will only be the forerunner of many more, visit to Bellefonte.

MEETING OF COUNTY COMMITTEE.

At ten o'clock on Monday morning Chairman Brown called a meeting of the county committed and very flattering reports were handed in from most all the precincts in the county. Resolutions were passed endorsing the state and county ticket, and especially Senator Delamater, and pledging him the undivided support of the party in this county.

A Great Storm in the Valleys.

The heavy black clouds that passed to the north of Bellefonte on Friday noon proved to be a succession of heavy thunder showers in Nittany and Bald Eagle Valleys. The storms swept down Bald Eagle Valley as far as Beech Creek and then passed southward into Nittany Valley. One heavy thunder storm was followed by several others in close succession and for an hour or more the rain fell in torrents. Fields prepared for seeding were badly damaged by washing and riverlets were flooded until they became raging streams carrying away fences and washing the public roads into deep gutters. There was but little wind accompanied the storm and no hail. The constant flashes of lightning were terrifying and numerous trees and fence posts were shattered, but so far, as learned, no buildings were struck. Beech Creek, Marsh Creek and other smaller tributaries of Bald Eagle creek rose rapidly but subsided immediately after the rain ceased. The storm is said to have been the heaviest experienced in that section since the rain that caused the June flood last year.

Arrested for Murder.

Saturday's Philipsburg Journal says: Yesterday two men one by the name of G. S. Baker and Wm. Todhunter, each provided with a gun, went hunting in the neighborhood of Houtzdale. Towards evening they reached Atlantic Mines, and while there a shot from one of the guns passed through the head of G. S. Baker.

Todhunter has been arrested for having fired the shot and killing Baker, but he asserts that the latter killed himself.

It appears an unlikely story that after a day's hunt that one of the party should deliberarely kill himself. Baker is a married man and has a wife and six children and is 35 years of age.

Todhunter will be taken to Clearfield, this morning and there placed in charge of the sheriff.

Don't be Too Critical.

Some people almost get beside themselves with ghoulish glee if they discover a typographical error in a newspaper. All such persons should carefully consider the following: Every column in a newspaper contains from twelve to twenty thousand distinct pieces of metal-displacement of any one of them would cause a blunder or typographical error, And yet some people lay claim to particular smartness if they can discover an error in a newspaper. When some people find a word with a wrong letter in or letter misplaced, they are sure they could spell that word right, and they are happy for a whole day, and go around to the neighbors and show them a word that is spelled wrong.

Died.

On the 7th inst at her residence near Zion, in Walker township, Mrs. Mary Jane Rupert, wife of Theodore B Rupert, aged 67 years, 10 months and 4 days. Mrs. Rupert was the daughter of Thomas McCalmont and is the last member of a large family, who lived and died on her native homestead.

Forty years ago the McCalmonts constituted the most numerous as well as the most influential families of Marion and Walker townships. The death of Mrs. Rupert removes the last land mark, their homes having all passed into other names.

FINAL PREPARATION.

All the Arrangements Completed for the P. of H. Picnic Next Week.

By Saturday, the 12th inst., the preparations will be about completed for the 17th annual picnic and exhibition of the Patrons of Husbandry of Central Pennsylvania to be held in Grange Park at Centre Hall, on the line of the Lewisburg and Tyrone R R., during the week of the 15th to the 20th of Sept.

Mr. John Dauberman, Superintendent of Improvements, has done his work well. The buildings are neat and attractive. Capt. G M Boal, Supt. of Camp will have the camp pleasantly arranged with all the conveniences to make it comfortable for the people. Mr. George Dale, Supt. of Exhibition, has his plans for the grounds completed so that exhibitors will be able to show their machinery to the best advantage. Mr. Geo. Gingerich, Supt. of the Live Stock Department, has comfortable and spacious stabling ready for the exhibition of horses, cattle and other live stock. He also has charge of the Commissary department, which is thorough. Mr. J J Arney, Supt. of Amusements and other Sutler Privileges, will have a grand treat for the people—music, fireworks, shows, boarding houses and everything necessary to make camp pleasant.

The committee has labored incessantly for weeks to make the grounds satisfactory and pleasant to the people. Everyone will be greatly pleased, and we feel sure that an appreciative public will liberally patronize the picnic and exhibition by camping there during part or all the week and attending en masse.

The programme for the week will be as follows:

MONDAY.

Going into camp and getting the exhibits in their proper places.

TUESDAY:

At 2 p. m., opening ceremonies in the large auditorium tent. The transfering of the entire completed exhibition to the County Grange by the chairman, Hon. Leonard Rhone. An address of acceptance by Hon. I S Frain, master of the County Grange. Address, by Col. James F Weaver, lecturer for the County Grange. Address by Mr. R A Downing, of Chester county.

WEDNESDAY.

At 10 a. m., Dedication of grounds and buildings, which will take place in the auditorium and be in charge of Col. R H Thomas, secretary of Penna. State Grange, followed by an address by Mr Benninger, of Northampton county. At 2 p. m., address by his excellency, Gov. Luce, of Michigan. Addresses by Gen. D H Hastings and J F Hall, the latter master of Connecticut State Grange. In the evening there will be a musical and literary entertainment by a local glee club and recitations by Miss Emma Brewer, of Delaware county, Miss Mary Rhone and others.

THURSDAY.

At 10 a. m., address by Col. J H Brigham, of Ohio, master of the National Grange, and Senator Brown, of York county, lecturer for the Penna. State Grange. At 2 p. m., address by Hon. Mortimer Whitehead, of New Jersey, lecturer for the National Grange, and others. In the evening at 7.30, a display of fireworks in charge of John Sourbeck, of Bellefonte. At 8.30, musical and literary entertainment.

FRIDAY:

At 10 a. m., and at 2 p. m. addresses in the Auditortum. The speakers will be announced in the Camp Daily during the week.

We will consider it a great honor if those in attendance will do us the honor of attending our meeting in the auditorium, especially the Dedication ceremonies, as all the meetings will be public. We will not detain you at any one more than one half hour.

Admission free and all are cordially invited: LEONARD RHONE, Chairman
Centre Hall, Pa.

The Veteran's Picnic.

Saturday morning was a very disagreeable one conesquently there were not near so many persons took advantage of the opportunity to picnic with the veterans at Philipsburg as there would have been had the weather been more favorable. As it was there were not over fifty persons who went from this place. But once there the day was not so bad as it might have been. Only a couple small showers fell during the day and it was not enough to mar the pleasure of the occasion. Attorney Lichtenthaler made the address of welcome. Governor Reaver presided at the business meeting and also made a short address. D. F. Fortney, Esq., of this place, made the oration of the day. Sev-everal other speeches were made.

It was decided at the business meeting to hold the reunion next year at Grange Park, Centre Hall, sometime during the month of September, the date of which will be announced in the future.

Good Music.

The members of the Reformed choir have prepared another choral service to be rendered next Sunday evening at 7.30. Those who heard the service given a few months ago by the same choir spoke of it in the highest terms of praise, and this will afford them an opportunity of hearing the rendition of another programme if anything more excellent than the first. Several of the old standard hymns, with their origin given, will be sung. Mr. Meyer, who has charge of the choir, desires us to say that this service will not be as extended as the former one. Let there be a large audience and all join in worshipping the Lord with praise and thanksgiving.

—Nordeck September 11.

A Wonderful Family.

A Pottstown paper is responsible for the following. A dispatch from the South tells of a most remarkable family, the Walkers, living near Hendersonville North Carolina, and if true there is nothing in the U. S. Census reports that will beat it. William Walker, the oldest member of the family, was a soldier in war of 1812, and professes to remember the Revolutionary war. He is generally supposed to be about 110 years of age, although the record is not as exact as might be wished.

At an early day Walker came to North Carolina, where he raised a family of 22 children, equally divided between the sexes. The 11 boys ranged in height from 6 feet 4 inches to 7 feet, all of them are still living. Seven of these men have sons; and there is not one of these sons who is less than 6 feet in height. There are twenty-five grown grandsons, and five grown great grandsons, and every one of them is full 6 feet and over in height,

They have always lived in the mountains a few miles from Hendersonville, and follow farming for a livelihood, record has been kept of the generations, but there are five living generations, and the families have been large, so that the descendants of this man, who is still living, if brought together would make a respectable sized town.

Personal Pencilings.

Miss Josephine McDermott, is at home again, after about a month spent in Philipsburg.

Mr. Clement Dale, wife and child returned on Saturday from Cresson, where they had been sojourning for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lane are now in Charleston, W. Va., where they went to take their young son Freddie, to attend school.

Miss Robe Hensel, one of Altoona's, fair maids, after spending a few days with her friends in this place, departed for her home on Monday evening.

Mrs. Leonard George and little daughter Annie, of Brooklyn, New York, who have been visiting at the residence of John Anderson, returned home on Monday.

Mr. Will Bosner, the efficient and obliging messenger carrier of the Western Union of this place, departed Monday morning for Duncansville, to attend the Fair that is in progress there.

Mr. Benner Armor, who has been spending his vacation day's with his parents, in this place departed for New Jersey, on the early train to be present at the opening of the winter term.

Mr. H. U. Tibbens, of Houtzdale, a recent graduate of the Bellefonte High School, is now employed on the editorial staff of the Altoona "Chat." Mr. Tibbens is naturally bright and witty and it is already assured that future issues of that already bright journal will sparkle more brilliantly than ever.

Badly Injured.

Mr. E. C. Hicklen, of Mt. Eagle, track foreman on the Bald Eagle railroad, was found on Tuesday afternoon, by the crew of the local freight, lying under the Curtin bridge badly injured and in an unconscious condition. He was picked up and taken to his home at Mt. Eagle. It was at first supposed that he had been struck by an engine but it is now believed that he fell from the bridge. We have not yet been able to learn just how bad he is hurt.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

The Lemont Train Wrecked But no Lives Lost—The Fireman the Only One Injured.

The morning train coming in over the Lemont railroad met with a bad wreck just this side of Axe Mann by which the engine was thrown down over the embankment and completely wrecked but, strange and miraculous as it may seem, the cars were not upturned though they left the track, and there were none injured but the fireman who was seriously, though it is believed not fatally, scalded and had his one ankle hurt by being pinned fast under the engine. The engineer escaped by crawling back over the tender.

The accident was caused by part of the flange having broken off the front pony wheel on the left side of the engine and when coming around the curve just this side of the station the engine left the track and went down the embankment; not, however, before running about fifty feet, then it went square down over the embankment which, at that place, is about 12 feet high. That the two cars were not pulled along is the most miraculous part of the entire occurrence, Then great loss of life would have inevitably been the result, as there was a large train load of passengers. As it was all may thank a kind providence for another of those miraculous escapes that are happening daily. The road can be cleared in a couple hours so that there will necessarily will be no delay in travel.

Disciples and Baptists May Unite.

There is now being held at Scranton, Pa., a State Conference of the Christian church. The following special which appeared in Monday's Press will be of especial interest to persons residing in this place.

The conference of the Christian church at its sessions yesterday authorized a co operation plan between the Disciples and Baptists of Bellefonte, by which they can jointly own property and worship together the same plan to be applicable in any other portion of the conference jurisdiction whenever deemed advisable. The plan is adopted on the recommendation of the Central Pennsylvania Baptist Association.

—The chicken and wafle supper held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Saturday evening by the ladies of the Evangelical church proved a wonderful success. Mr. Henry Harris certainly thought so, judging from the way he kept passing back his plate for "just a little more chicken and wafle, please," and each time it was sent back to him piled heapen full. Of course the chicken was nice and tender and the wafles very delicious which will partly account for the rapidity with which Mr. Harris put them out of sight. Come to think of it, Mr. Ed. Shaffer was almost a match for Mr. Harris.

—The talk current that the glass works meadow is to be fitted up as a park to be known as the Athletic grounds in which there will be a first class ball ground, meets with the universal approval of everybody. But while the thing is being done it had better be done right. Build an artificial lake with a bath house attached; construct a race track, fix up good base ball diamond and make a tennis court. In brief make that a place of recreation and amusement second to none in the State.

Persons wishing their house photographed or any outdoor views taken should take advantage of cloudy days as the light and shade blend more evenly and the finished photograph looks more artistic. J. A. Finkbinder can make them on short notice. Try him. s10-4t.

Married

On last Thursday evening Rev. George Elliot joined in the holy bonds of wedlock, Miss Martha Weld, late of Bellefonte, and Mr. Robert Thompson, of Port Matilda. Mr. T. owns a very nice farm in the vicinity of Port Matilda and the happy couple will there make their future home. We wish them a prosperous happy and journey through life.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.
